Residents Angry At Thoroughgood Vandals

Kids Are Blamed
For Spraypaintings, Destroyed Mailboxes

By Karen Dalrymple
Staff Writer

Thoroughgood residents should not be frightened that there are satanic groups infiltrating through their neighborhood.

What they should worry about, however, are bored teenagers who have nothing better to do than vandalize other people's property.

According to Virginia Beach Police Department's Detective Don Rimer, Thoroughgood residents are more angry than they are scared about the recent rash of vandalism that has occurred in their tight-knit community. Several mailboxes have been bashed in, removed from the ground, or spraypainted with pentagrams or heavy metal music band's names.

"Graffiti is satanic in nature and sometimes its symbols are related to heavy metal music groups," said Rimer.

It is apparent, Rimer said, that there are some teens in the neighborhood with an interest in heavy metal music. The band Slayer's name was painted on several mailboxes and street signs.

Thoroughgood resident Lillian Youell was out of town when the vandalism took place more than a week ago. But, when she returned she found that her neighbors' mailbox had been destroyed.

"We were just sick about it. I wish the police would catch them. It's got to be some teenagers in the neighborhood," said Youell, who lives on Hermitage Point.

Youell said that her mailboxes have been yanked out of the ground on several occasions; one was found in the cove behind her house. The newest mailbox at the end of her driveway has been anchored into the ground with concrete.

"This interferes with commerce and with mail delivery," she said. "To think, the minute school lets out - these kids have no responsibility."

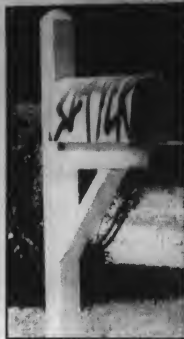

Terri Dennis, who lives on Wakefield Circle, on the opposite side of the neighborhood from where the vandalism occurred, said she doesn't recall this type of destruction ever occurring before - at least not this bad.

"For years, kids loved to knock mailboxes down and drive their jeeps through front yards. But, other than that, there's been no other vandalism," she said.

Another neighbor of Youell's, who requested that her name not be published, was a victim of the recent vandalism. Her mailbox post was bashed in, the glass on her lamp post was broken, and a sign with the family's name on it was removed and stuck in the mud of a neighbor's yard.

She blames the vandalism on teenagers having too much time on their hands.

"Thank God they didn't bash in my mailbox. I hope this will be the end of it," the woman said. "You just don't know what kids will think of next."

The woman, who lives on Hermitage Point, said she did report the damage to the police. The police arrived immediately, but said there was not much that they could do.

Rimer, who said that the vandals are probably younger children, perhaps 12 or 13 years old, said that any arrests made will be for destruction of property. So far, there are no leads.

"We have no reports of satanic activities or occult activities in that neighborhood," he said. "They

Human Rights Discussion Set For August 6

By Lee Cahill
City Council Correspondent

A full-scale discussion on whether or not the city should establish a human rights commission has been scheduled for August 6.

However, reaction by city council last week to the final report of the Fellowship Committee indicates considerable reservations about having a commission at all.

The committee recommended that the city establish and 11-member human rights commission selected by council for three-year terms.

The commission envisioned by the committee would be educational and would advise city council, and would direct citizens to the appropriate agency for the resolution of problems. The cost, as presented by the committee would be minimal - a part-time secretary, a place to meet and some money for materials and postage. The committee suggested that the city's Equal Employment Opportunity Commission officer be assigned to serve as executive officer of the commission.

The Rev. William J. Dale, chairman of the committee, said that the perception of violations of human rights, rather than any particular eroding of human rights, was a critical component in the state of the attitudes of citizens as well as visitors to the city.

Two members of the 20-member committee, Marion Harris and Bobbi LeFavor, differed from the majority and do not think that the available information indicates a need for a human rights commission in the city.

Some council members also wanted more general discussion before placing an ordinance establishing the commission on the floor.

Councilman Harold Heischouer said that it was a "very important subject and has to be structured correctly." He wanted council to discuss on August 6, after council's two-week break for the summer, to discuss more fully what it wants to do for the alleviation of misconceptions. He said that then the council could move ahead to determine what the community's needs are in respect to human rights.

Vice Mayor Robert E. Fontress had moved that City Attorney Leslie Lile be directed to bring back an ordinance establishing the commission. The Fellowship Committee, which had the services of the City Attorney's Office at its meetings, submitted a proposed ordinance with its report. It was this report, the council presumably would consider at the August meeting.

However, Councilman James W. Brazier, Jr. said that the city council should give the city attorney more clear directions. "If we create a commission it's going to disappear in the woodwork," he said that he agreed with Dale that it was a perception problem. He said the problem is fueled by the press.

Two speakers wanted the commission to have stronger powers than were recommended by the committee. The Rev. Jerome C. Ross, a member of the committee said that the commission should have subpoena powers. He said that the city needs an instrument that's going to guarantee security of our rights. Persons don't need to know where to go but that there is a body there to guarantee their rights.

George Minns, president of the Virginia Beach Chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, backed the recommendation, but said that the commission "should be more than just a committee with a name on paper." If the commission does not have the ability to investigate, he said, it has no power. He said that people are divided between those

Female Chairmen Hope
All Goes Well This Year

By Karen Dalrymple
Staff Writer

This year, the success of the East Coast Surfing Championship, the longest consecutively running surfing championship in the world, rests on the shoulders of two women.

For nearly six months, Kate Burns and Paula Bloom, the only two women to have ever chaired the Virginia Beach Jaycee-sponsored event at one time, have been organizing committees and rounding up sponsors and vendors, with the help of an ECSC director and the rest of the Jaycee organization.

"We have to try and coordinate everyone to make the whole weekend come together," said Burns, a Rosemont Forest resident. "We've had some shaky times, but it's really coming together very well."

Burns and Bloom decided to volunteer to take on the job at the last minute in February. The two had worked on several other Jaycee projects together and found that they made a good team. The chairmen are usually appointed in October, but as of February, the Jaycees hadn't found anyone to take on the responsibility.

"We decided, 'what the hay, let's just do it,'" said Burns.

There have been women co-chairs for the event in the past, Burns said, but never two alone. Usually, the woman is paired up with a man. According to Burns, "this is a first, but not the last."

The East Coast Surfing Championships will be held August 23, 24 and 25.

Bloom said that the women received much support and no reservations from the organization. The Jaycees were confident that they could handle the work load, she said.

"We said, 'sure, we can do this.' We work well together. We're both very organized," said Bloom, a Navy lieutenant and special assistant to the commanding officer at Fleet Combat Training Center At-lantia.

Organization should be a prerequisite for making the country's oldest surfing championship run smoothly. This is the 29th year of the ECSC, which will be held August 23, 24 and 25 at the Oceanfront. Many years ago, the event was held at Camp Pendleton before being moved to 1st Street.

"It started out as a local surfing championship. It has grown and grown and we have national and local sponsors and contestants," said

"Troubled" Teens Take Care Of Environment

Program Needs Funds
To Survive, Says Youth Supervisor Cuthrell

By Kerry Lyndsay Hofheimer
Staff Writer

Wellington Woods' Mitch Cuthrell has learned to walk a fine line with the juvenile offenders he supervises for the Chesapeake Bay Youth Conservation Corps.

Cuthrell, 26, an ODU geology major, spends many hours with teens who have court sentences to do volunteer work benefiting the environment. He said his job requires a sensitive approach.

"You can't be too easy or too hard on the kids," he said. "You can't break bad or be totally their pals."

Cuthrell, one of CBYCC's two staff members, said the best approach for him to take with the youth is a firm lead, keeping a positive attitude and a little distance between him and the kids.

The kids aren't dangerous - they are nonviolent offenders who have been caught, perhaps shoplifting, vandalizing or using illegal drugs. Through the CBYCC over the past two years, teens have undertaken many projects, such as waterway cleanups, water sampling and monitoring for wetlands violations.

Cuthrell was one of five staff originally hired and only he and one other, the program's director Megan McCarthy, are left, due to a tight financial squeeze.

Currently the CBYCC is looking for money so it can continue, Cuthrell said. Its budget runs out July 1, and this means the teenagers who got into trouble for the first time and were assigned to the corps by a judge could be reassigned and possibly sent to a detention home.

CBYCC has been sending out grant applications for several months, but money is scarce, Cuthrell said. The program, which has already won various awards, needs over $100,000.

"I hope we can keep this program alive," said Cuthrell. "The possibilities for it are unlimited if we can just keep it going."

Cuthrell said the teens learn about the environment and get the chance to see the law from the other side, since they help monitor wetlands violations. "We end up hiring some into the program, or we did, before our budget got low," he said.

Cuthrell, who wants to eventually pursue a career in environmental geology, coastal erosion or hydrogeology, said most kids end up liking the program.

"It's good hands-on experience for them," he said. "I've seen it make a lot of difference in some kids' lives. It gives them a positive outlook."

Cuthrell takes on various roles as a CBYCC staffer - he's a booster, environmentalist, supervisor and said sometimes he feels like a teacher, counselor or even a big brother.

He might see one particular kid for months on end, or only once, depending on the number of community hours he or she was assigned. Cuthrell said he generally has 15 or fewer teens at a time.

"You've really got to keep your eye on them," he said. So far only one fight has begun, but Cuthrell stopped it before anyone was hurt. Cuthrell said he never realized how rough some kids have it until working with these teens. "Some have their own kids and some have no parents," he said. "Some have been caught up in custody battles or have a father who's serving time. "It's amazing some of these kids are as normal as they are," he said. "I have more appreciation for what some kids go through now," he said.

Cuthrell's father is Bill Cuthrell, volunteer coordinator for Chesapeake Volunteers in Youth Services, Inc., and a Deep Creek native now residing in Wellington Woods in Virginia Beach.

Cuthrell was born in Myrtle Beach, S.C., and his father was in the U.S. Air Force when he was growing up. His family moved around, living in Colorado, Iceland and Oklahoma, among other places. Cuthrell's family later moved to Virginia Beach and he attended Cox High School.

Cuthrell said he works about 25 hours a week for the CBYCC, plus attends school full-time. His hobbies include surfing and boating and he said he enjoys nature and animals.

"I think I've learned a lot working for the corps," Cuthrell said. "I hope the program can find the funding to become something permanent."

Total Eclipse Will Be No Big Deal For Locals

Eclipse Chasers Travel To Mexico, Hawaii
To Capture The Moment

By Karen Dalrymple
Staff Writer

Virginia Beach residents expecting to be left in the dark during the July 11 total eclipse will be somewhat disappointed.

Only those in the Mexico, Baja, Calif., and Hawaii area will be able to experience the first total eclipse since 1970. On the East coast, however, the eclipse will seem like nothing more than a cloud passing in front of the sun.

Several local die-hard eclipse chasers will make the trek to the West coast, protective glasses and telescopes in hand, to capture the darkened moment. Kent Blackwell is one of a six-member group that is flying out to California to take a cruise ship to Mexico.

"I've been looking forward to this for about four years," the Kennebec resident said.

Blackwell experienced his first eclipse when it passed over

"When the moon totally eclipse the sun, you can see pink to red flares firing off the limb of the sun."

Kent Blackwell

Hampton Roads in 1970. Then, he traveled to Canada in 1972 and Africa in 1973 to witness two more.

"I thought, 'wow, I've got to see another one,'" he said.

During a total eclipse, the moon passes across the sun, bringing complete darkness to those in the path of totality. In Virginia Beach, only 19 percent of the diameter of the sun will be covered by the moon, therefore it will remain light out. In California, however, the sun will be covered 100 percent, said Bruce Hanna, planetarium director at Old Dominion University.

"It's not going to be something to play up this time," Hanna said.

Solar eclipses are not as uncommon as some might think. There are at least two solar eclipses each year and there can be as many as five. The United States doesn't see them very often because it is a small part of the total area of the earth.

According to Pat Ellis, a secretary at the Virginia Beach planetarium at Plaza Junior High

The Virginia Beach Sun

Eclipse

Beach Won't See It

Not many people have probably experienced a total eclipse of the sun in their lifetime. They don't happen very often in the United States, and when they do you have to be in the right place at the right time.

Americans are lucky this year. A total eclipse will occur on July 11. But, it will only be visible if you live near Hawaii, Mexico or California. Virginia Beach residents who don't know about the eclipse will probably never know that it even occurred. In this part of the United States, the eclipse will be no more than a cloud passing over the sun. Some people are so interested in the solar system that they are traveling all the way across the United States to view the eclipse.

Those who do see the eclipse should take precautions. It is very dangerous to look directly at the sun at any time, but during the eclipse it can be especially damaging. The sun during an eclipse can be observed safely by using indirect viewing methods or by looking through a filter specifically labeled "Safe for Direct Solar Viewing."

When you look at the sun, your eyes' lens focus intense energy on the retina, the delicate layer of photoreceptor cells at the back of the eye that causes visual images to be formed on the brain. This energy can burn the cells in the focused-on area, destroying the cells and resulting in a "blind spot."

Despite the permanent damage that may be done to the eyes, when an eclipse occurs, the desire to "see" something during this once-in-a-lifetime event, can cause people to stare at the sun for prolonged periods, allowing damaging radiation to enter the eye. - K.L.D.

Tragedy

Unfair To Friends, Family

The Janice Lee murder is one of those things we don't want to think about. We don't want to acknowledge or believe it. Yet, we can't help but want to know what happened.

Lee is described as a responsible 30-year-old who held down two jobs and still was struggling to make ends meet. She was the mother of two and wanted the best for her children. She was in between relationships with men. She was not unlike a lot of people.

Someone wanted to hurt Janice Lee. Someone wanted to torture this woman ceaselessly and take away her chances at living, her chances for happiness, love and success. Some sick mind is probably out in the community somewhere. Scary thought. Let's hope Lee's killer is apprehended soon.

While most will forget this case soon enough, Lee's family and friends will live with the tragedy, with thoughts and memories of a murder grotesque beyond words.

Life is not always fair. For Lee, it was not fair. For her family and friends, it was not fair. Why do things like this have to happen? One can only hope Lee's family and friends find the strength to survive this tragedy and go on with their own lives.

One can only hope they are able to release some of the pain, that they are able to grieve and then to get on with living. K.L.H.

Be Careful With Fireworks

It's hard to believe that it's already July. And with July comes a celebration of the country's independence. The Fourth of July is celebrated by all with fireworks, picnics, parties, you name it.

Though the Fourth of July is a day for fun and patriotism, it is also a day to be careful. Fireworks can be dangerous, especially if they land in the wrong hands. But, they shouldn't because fireworks are illegal in the state of Virginia. Many people purchase them in other states - South Carolina for example - on their way home from a vacation, but they are not supposed to be fired off in this state.

The only kind of fireworks that are legal are the kind the city features at its Fourth of July celebration. The colorful but noisy explosions are usually shot off of the 15th Street pier at the Oceanfront. The beach is usually packed with people that night, some setting up camp with lawn chairs and coolers.

Fireworks are a form of entertainment that can be enjoyed by the entire family. But, don't abuse fireworks. It could cost someone their life. - K.L.D.

Live Music Commentary

The Janitors, Denny Morgan on lead vocals, Jeff Snyder on the keyboards, Eddie Berman on guitar, Brice Crump on the drums, and Barry Blum on bass, will play at Ocean Eddie's July 3-4.

Janitors Are A Local Favorite

So ya wanna party, huh? Feel like gittin' 'n up and throwin' down? Well I've got the ticket for you.

The Janitors, Tidewater's finest party band, are cleaning up all over town. Whenever, and wherever they play, you can count on a full house of enthusiastic fans ready to boogie.

These guys pull out all the stops and jump on you from the first number and they don't let up until they make you sweat. This is my idea of what a fun party band should be.

Danny Morgan, the founder and only original member, is the leader and front man of this now well-known local favorite. He's full of energy and personality, and makes you feel right at home immediately.

Danny started the band at Virginia Tech back in 1982 and played the Western Carolina-Virginia college and club circuit until 1986 when he decided to take a sabbatical until 1989 when the urge to play overcame him and he could sit still no longer.

He reformed the group with bassist Barry Blum and a few others and played Hoppers and Shuckers, to name a few.

The band went through a few more personnel changes until they reached their current lineup. Each new edition made the band stronger and stronger, which no doubt has contributed to their popularity.

Barry is a funky, poppin', heck of a bass player. He's lightning quick and all over the place from one end of the neck to the other, much to the audience's amazement. He doesn't miss a note.

Bruce Crump, the drummer, looks and plays like someone you'd see on MTV instead of a bar. He plays solid and in there using double-bass drums for that extra pump that drives the Janitors. Girls really like this guy, (I couldn't help but over hear a few say they'd like to be better acquainted).

Jeff Snyder, formerly with Katz Gone Crazy, is a keyboard master. He has the degree to go along with his talent and he plays all the horn section parts with such accuracy, that if you hear the band outside the club, you wonder where the three-piece horns are when they see them. This guy is the keyboard doctor at A.L.M. when not performing with the group, and if you ever wanted to learn keys and synthesizer he's the man to see.

Last but definitely not least, is guitarist Eddie Berman. Eddie is probably one of the best guitarists in the country, no exaggeration here, and by far the most tasteful and skilled I have ever seen in this town. As a matter of fact, if you ask any local guitarist to name the best, Eddie Berman is the name that comes up more often than not. And Eddie is one of the most modest people you will meet when it comes to his talent. He graciously accepts compliments with an "aw, shucks" kind of response and makes you wish some of the lesser gifted guitar players had a fraction of his humility.

He plays with such finesse, like silicone tipped fingers sliding over strings of silk, capturing every nuance, and making playing the guitar look so easy and effortless. Then he takes a solo and rips your eyes out and you know you have just seen a first class player perform.

For the uninitiated, the Janitors are a fine example of American rhythm and blues, Motown and funk; good time music for happy feet. If you like the Blues Brothers, Van Morrison, James Brown, etc., then this is the band to see, if you haven't already.

You can catch them at Ocean Eddie's on the pier July 3-4. Be there or miss the time of your life.

City Council Briefs

Residents Asked To Save Water

By Lee Cahill
 City Council Reporter

For the time being, as least, filling swimming pools is not among the mandatory restrictions imposed on Virginia Beach citizens for water conservation.

A mandatory water conservation ordinance before city council last week was softened after recent rains alleviated some of the drought conditions in the area. The ordinance adopted by council gives the city manager the leeway to adopt any or all of the prohibitions on water uses. The swimming pool industry which cited a loss in business as soon as the mandatory ordinance was mentioned, got a reprieve.

It's okay to fill swimming or wading pools for now, but City Manager Aubrey V. Watts Jr. has the authority to include the pools among the prohibitions if the drought situation worsens. Also, pool supply companies were told that once a permit has been issued for the construction of a pool, the city will permit filling of the pool even if the mandatory restriction is in place.

The pool contractors argued that once the pool is full, it uses less water (for replacement) than an equal-sized parcel of lawn.

Virginia Beach, which receives all the water for its public water system from Norfolk, is required under its contract with Norfolk to parallel Norfolk's water restrictions. Two weeks ago, Virginia Beach called for voluntary conservation measures, but at the same time Norfolk adopted mandatory measures, Virginia Beach followed with a similar ordinance this last week.

But, since the rain had offered some relief insisted only those prohibitions against watering of shrubbery, trees, lawns, grass, plants or other vegetation, washing of automobiles, trucks, trailers or any other type of mobile equipment except facilities with a recycling system and exhibiting a sign saying the system is in operation, washing of sidewalks, streets, driveways, parking areas, service station aprons, exteriors of homes, apartments, commercial or industrial buildings or any other outdoor surface, and the operation of any ornamental fountain or other structure making a similar use of water.

The pool contractors asked for an exemption under the provision of the ordinance which gives the city manager the authority to exempt those uses which are directly essential to preserve employment, livelihood or the viability of any commercial enterprise.

who perceive there is no problem and whose who have been victims of the problem.

The idea for a human rights commission is another by-product of Laborfest 1990. Minns was one of the early initiators of a human rights commission here. Although the state has a human rights commission, local supporters of a local commission felt that the people needed some organization closer to them.

Reports of the high costs of maintaining commissions in other communities dulled enthusiasm for a special commission here. Dale said that finances should not be a barrier for the commission: he said that the committee expected costs to be kept low. He said that no remuneration was contemplated for members of the commission, and that other than a part-time secretary and office supplies, and a place to meet, the committee did not contemplate excessive costs.

The proposed ordinance outlines the duties of the commission as advisory and education. The committee would develop recommendations for city council and would gather and disseminate studies and issue reports, and conduct public forums for discussion of discrimination.

Heischberger's motion to discuss the issue more before issuing any directions to the city attorney in regard to drawing up an ordinance failed by a vote of 5-6 with those voting in favor including councilmen John A. Baum, Brazier, Heischberger and Louis R. Jones, and councilwoman Reba McClanahan.

Brazier said that council "ought to discuss it. I do not agree with the recommendation of the study." He said that all the commission would do is create press coverage.

"If I make any misstep," added Baum, "we'll be crucified in the press."

Fentress said that he did not understand Heischberger's motion, that the city would not be moving ahead.

As for understanding the Heischberger motion, Mayor Meyera Oberdorf said, "I don't either."

She said that Fentress' motion could be voted up or down. When Lilley returns with a proposed ordinance, it would be on the regular agenda so that people would have an opportunity to talk, she said.

Councilman Paul J. Lantagne said that the issue was being made more complicated than it is.

"If we don't discuss it first," said Baum, "all you're going to do is form a committee and that's not going to help things a lot."

Fentress' motion was approved by a vote of 7-4. Voting against the motion were Baum, Brazier, Heischberger and Jones.

With the separation of church and state issue yet to be resolved by the courts, City Council recently approved the issuance of $9.5 million in tax-free industrial revenue bonds to Regent University, formerly CBN University.

The university will not sell the bonds, however, until the circuit Court makes a decision on whether the issuance of the bonds is a violation of the Constitution relating to the separation of church and state.

The bonds would be used to construct 14 two-story dormitory buildings, each with eight housing units at 1000 Centerville Turnpike in the CBN complex and to refund the bonds issued to the University in 1984 to construct 14 two-story buildings also for student housing.

Lee Boothby, counsel for the Americans United for the Separation of Church and State, told council that the organization is concerned that the issuance of the bonds contains a potential for a Constitutional infringement.

He referred to a similar situation involving Liberty University, a church-related establishment in Lynchburg. Although the circuit court found the issuance of Industrial Revenue Bonds to the institution within the parameters of the Industrial Development Revenue Bond Act, the decision was overturned by the late Supreme Court.

David Gyerston, president of Regent University, said that the student housing is not for the advancement of religion. He said that traffic would be reduced, because the students would not have to travel long distances to school, and that the construction will benefit the inhabitants of the city. He said that no federal, state or city money would be involved in the project.

No-tax revenue bonds were conceived as an instrument for stimulating business and industrial development and adding jobs in the community where the bonds are issued. The bonds do not cost the city anything, and the full faith of the city is not behind the bonds. The borrower borrows money from a financial institution as in any similar transaction, but money is saved by the exemption from taxes.

When asked by Mayor Meyera Oberdorf whether enrollment at the university and jobs are open to anyone, Gyerston said that while enrollment is open, full-time employees are required to subscribe to the basic tenets of the Judeo-Christian ethic.

Boothby said that under the Bond Act, authorization of the tax-free bonds is permitted for colleges and graduate schools but not for religious training or theological institutions. The bonds must be for the benefit of the Commonwealth, he said.

The act contains restrictions concerning the nature of the institution. He said that Regent's primary purpose, religious or theological training, makes the school ineligible for the bonds under state and federal law.

He said that the school's graduate catalog for 1990-91 sets forth a statement of faith saying Regent is a Christian-centered institution, committed to evangelical application. Accepted students are required to understand and be committed to the articles of faith, according to the catalog.

Among the University's schools is a College of Theological Ministry, and a program is provided for counseling and dealing with ministries. Boothby said that specific restrictions on admission are based on religious belief.

Boothby, a Washington attorney, after the council meeting, said that his group, which has approximately 50 members in Virginia Beach, was surprised that the issue here came up so soon after the Supreme Court struck down the decision on the Liberty University bonds.

He said that his group wants to avoid litigation. He said that in a pluralistic society, the bonds are not the appropriate type of funding for the university. He asked that the council abide by the Supreme Court decision.

Robert Engesser, a Kempville resident who appeared to object to the issuance of the bonds to Regent, said that the city shielded him because of the cross.

Oberdorf informed him that the city seal was not on trial and that the work out of order. Engesser said that the shield indicated that the city was for Christians and everybody else was not welcome.

Oberdorf said that the city is composed of many races and religions, and that she, who is Jewish, "has never felt uncomfortable." The cross, she said, merely indicated that the Christians were first to reach the shores of this country, which, she said, is "still the most wonderful country."

She said that Virginia Beach is "one of the most welcoming and fair-minded cities."

Joseph A. Brad, who said that he was not affiliated with any organization wanted to know how the city would benefit from the bond issue. He said that Founders Inn recently constructed by CBN, did not use any construction company from Virginia Beach although he saw some from Richmond, Williamsburg and other parts of the state.

He said that the university would help the citizens better they used some of the depressed real estate in the city for student housing. Aside from the Constitutional issue, he said, he was not against CBN University, but that the housing project may be the wrong type of thing to do and the wrong timing."

Gyerston said that Regent is a private, fully-accredited non-profit institution which anticipated a student enrollment of 3,000 by the end of the decade. He said that the purpose of the school is to educate graduate students and to provide specific religious training.

Fifty percent of the students he said, are not affiliated with any denomination, the University has no required chapel attendance and is not controlled in any respect by a specific church.

The impact statement on the bond application shows that the housing will contribute $250,000 a year in the purchase of goods and services and will employ three persons full-time at an average salary of $15,000.

Planning Director Robert Scott said that the amendments are perceived as a type of building category that would protect the residents. He said they were more restrictive.

Councilwoman Reba McClanahan said that the amendments pertaining to density may be interpreted either way.

Council Decides Not To Increase Parking Meter Fees At Oceanfront

By Lee Cahill
City Council Reporter

City Council dropped proposed changes in parking meter times and fees like a hot potato - at least enough members to make up a slim majority did - rather than place more restrictions on parking at the resort.

The proposals originated with Councilman Paul J. Lantagne as a way to increase revenues for the city and to provide more parking at the beach by discouraging lingering parkers with higher fees.

The staff studied the proposals and came up with four recommendations giving council a choice of one or more of the recommendations. They included:

- An increase to 75 cents an hour from the 25-cent-a-half-hour rate in all zones.
- An increase in the allowable parking time from two hours to three hours.
- An increase in the enforcement times from 9 a.m. to 7 p.m. to 24 hours a day except from 30th Street north, which remains 9 a.m. to 7 p.m.
- An increase in the expired meter penalty from $6 to $12 and increases in the penalty for failure to pay within three working days from $12 to $24.

Mayor Meyera Oberdorf said that she had received letters indicating that the changes were "very, very upsetting."

Watts said that he would make every effort to let people know about the changes and Lantagne moved for approval of all four recommendations.

Councilman Robert W. Clyburn made a substitute motion for a deferral to give the manager time for further study.

"But that's what they did," replied Vice Mayor Robert E. Fentress. Clyburn said he would probably be one of those people who gets a ticket.

Councilwoman Reba McClanahan said that she would second Clyburn's motion, noting that the changes would go into effect in the middle of the summer. Watts said that it would take three weeks to change over.

"The last time we did this," said McClanahan, "we heard from every senator and delegate in Richmond." She said that she did not go where "see parking meters (operating) 24 hours a day."

Clyburn added that the city had lifted some restrictions (skating on the boardwalk) and "now we're putting on additional restrictions." He changed his motion to defer the matter "indefinitely."

McClanahan said that she would prefer to defer the issue forever.

Councilman John A. Baum asked, "Who wants to run in and out of a restaurant to put money in meters?"

When Clyburn got a second to his motion, remarked Fentress, "he's got a lot of courage."

"He's got Reba behind him," added Councilman Louis R. Jones.

Deferring things will not help at all, Fentress said.

Other communities that don't have 24-hour parking don't have the demand, said Lantagne, "We have the demand."

He said that the turnover will increase so more people can park, and fees, he said, haven't been increased since 1984.

He said he would like to see the increased revenue so that people who live off the waterfront don't have to pay more real estate taxes.

As for the people who call to complain about parking tickets, councilman James W. Brazier, Jr. said, "If you don't put money in the meter you get a ticket."

Voting to defer the issue indefinitely were Baum, Clyburn, Heischberger, Oberdorf, McClanahan and councilwoman Nancy Parker.

Heischberger said that some change should be made in fees at city parking lots, but that the "24 hour meters bothers me a lot."

Oberdorf asked the staff for a full presentation on parking lots and metered parking at the resort.

David Karmol, general counsel for the national Spa and Pool Institute, said that a pool uses less water than an equivalent area in grass, that pools are not emptied at the end of a season, that a Santa Clara, Calif., study shows that for 800 pools the amount of water used in a year is one hour's worth.

Banning swimming pools, he said, will have no measurable effect but will injure people in the pool business.

Len Glasier, president of the East Coast Pool Association, said that the Norfolk and Virginia Beach ordinances already have affected business. He said that the two toughest years for the pool industry were 1989, which was excessively wet, and 1990, which was warm. He said that the industry does the bulk of

Virginia Beach's Juice Newton Returns Home

Juice Newton, one of the country's most popular country/pop singers, will return to her native city of Virginia Beach on Sunday, July 21 for the next "Mother of All Homecomings," sponsored by the Hampton Roads Chamber of Commerce.

The party is an official activity of Operation Homecoming, the region-wide celebration of the return of troops from the Middle East.

The public is invited and admission is free.

Lewis McGhee and The Embers also will perform during the homecoming party, which will be held from 4 to 8 p.m. on vacant land next to Princess Anne Commercial Bank on Lynnhaven Parkway.

Food and other refreshments will be available for purchase from a variety of vendors. Free Coca-Cola will be provided courtesy of McDonald's and Coca-Cola USA.

Newton was born Judy Kay Newton in Virginia Beach, the daughter of a naval enlisted man.

Newton is renowned for both the electricity of her stage performances and the subtle passion of her records. Ever since her platinum album, "Juice," broke her into the top of the country and pop charts in 1981, she has brought emotional depth to the country/pop winners' circle with hits like "Queen of Hearts," "Angel of the Morning," and "A Little Love."

This will be the second in a series of three parties coordinated by the chamber. The third and final "Mother of All Homecomings" party is scheduled for the fall at a still-to-be-determined site. There are still many Hampton Roads military personnel who will not have returned home by July 4.

More than 20,000 people - many of them military personnel and their families - were on hand for the first party May 5 at Norfolk's Town Point Park.

The celebrations have been possible because of the generous support of a number of corporate sponsors. Support levels have ranged from one-star up through five-star, and to parlor, the highest level of support.

Patriot sponsors of Operation Homecoming are McDonald's, Tidewater Association, McDonald's Corporation, Farm Fresh and Nissan Motor Corp. (Bob Crumpler Nissan, Bob Crumpler's Denbigh Nissan, Green Gifford Motor Corp. and Hampton Nissan), and The Virginian-Pilot and The Ledger-Star.

The five-star sponsors are Golden State Foods, Corp., Coca-Cola USA and Keystone Foods Corp. The lone four-star sponsor is Hoffman Beverage Company. The three-star sponsors are CAP Telephone Co., Amphibious Base Foodstuffs, Inc., Fine's Men's Shops, Inc., Ford Motor Company, The Family Channel and Jackson Hewitt Tax Service.

Operation Homecoming is presented by the Hampton Roads Chamber of Commerce.

Lewis McGhee will begin the entertainment at 4 p.m. He will be followed at approximately 5 p.m. by The Embers and Ronald McDonald at 6:15 p.m. Juice Newton is scheduled to begin her performance at 6:45 p.m.

NAS Negotiates Agreement

The Navy and the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) entered into an agreement recently, known as a Resource Conservation and Recovery Act (RCRA) 3008 (h) Consent Order.

Under the agreement, various sites at Naval Air Station (NAS) Oceana will be studied to determine if contamination exists, sampled and, if necessary, the sites will be remediated within specific time frames.

The sites include old landfills and areas where spills of solvents and fuel/oil are suspected. Initial investigations have been completed at over half of the NAS Oceana sites.

There is no evidence that pollutants have migrated off the station or that a public health hazard exists. Several sites are expected to be exempted from further study pending EPA review of recent reports documenting insignificant contamination.

CH2M Hill, Inc. has been contracted by the Navy to complete the additional studies required by the agreement.

All studies will be reviewed by a Technical Review Committee (TRC) comprised of representatives from the air station, state and federal regulatory agencies, the city of Virginia Beach, and the local community. In addition, a community relations plan is being developed to promote factual and timely dissemination of study findings to the general public.

LTVB Presents Big River

The Little Theatre of Virginia Beach's next production will be Big River.

Directed by Nancy Curtis, Big River is the story of Huck Finn and Tom Sawyer on the big river. The show opens on July 19 and runs July 20, 21, 26, 27, 28, August 2, 3, 4, 9, 10, 11, 16, 17, 18, 23 and 24.

Season ticket holders can begin making reservations on June 28. Regular reservations will open on July 5.

Due to the current economic conditions the theatre has been forced to raise ticket prices. The new prices are $8 for adults and $6 for students and seniors for the evening performances. All seats are $6 for the Sunday matinees.

Brochures for the 1991-92 season have been mailed. Tickets can only be sold until Oct. 19.

The annual membership meeting was held recently and new members of the board of directors were elected. They are Helen Sarrett, Tom Felton, George Mentz, Tom Neary and Joe Sasso.

Season tickets cannot be used for the summer show. Advanced ticket sales will be available Thursdays, Fridays and Saturdays from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. Also, the box office will be open for advanced ticket sales July 12 through 18 from 6 to 8 p.m.

Amendments

In making his motion for approval, Vice Mayor Robert E. Fentress asked that the Planning Department and Planning Commission look at the entire area.

Under the new ordinance, permitted uses are limited to single family, duplex and semi-detached dwelling units, public buildings and grounds and public utilities. A limited number of higher intensity uses, including offices and multiple family dwellings, would be available through the conditional use permit process. Higher intensity uses, such as financial institutions and restaurants would not be permitted.

Vietnam Vets Gather At CBN

The first national gathering of Vietnam veterans since the Persian Gulf War will be held June 28 through 30 at the Founders Inn and Conference Center at CBN.

Hundreds of veterans from across the United States will attend the three-day conference. At the opening session at 12:45 p.m. on Friday, veteran Roger Helle will talk about the emotional impact of the Persian Gulf War on those who fought in Vietnam.

William R. Kimball, founder and president of Vets With a Mission, will talk about survivor's guilt. Kimball's organization returns American veterans to Vietnam to renovate orphanages and clinics.

Other conference topics will include post traumatic stress disorder, anger, and why Vietnam was different from other wars. Special seminars will be conducted for spouses.

This is the fourth Vietnam veterans conference sponsored by the Christian Broadcasting Network, Inc. About 800 veterans and their spouses have attended previous meetings.

Among the veterans at this year's conference will be Dorell "Snokey" Hall, a 45-year-old terminally ill veteran from Florida, whose last wish is to come to the conference.

Church

Tabernacle Luncheon Slated

Tabernacle United Methodist Church will hold its 37th annual lotus luncheon on Wednesday, July 17 from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. The cost for adults is $5; children 12 to 12, $2.50; under six are free.

The church is located at 1265 Sandbridge Road. A country bazaar will be held outside with fresh vegetables, homemade breads, pickles and jellies.

Schools Benefit From Recycling

Recycling newspapers continues to benefit Virginia Beach public schools through a program established by the city's Department of Public Works.

Four schools were recognized by the department for collecting the most newspapers per student from January to May. The Department of Public Works will give each school a computer for its collecting efforts. The schools are Bayside High, Great Neck Junior High, Woodstock Elementary and Malibu Elementary.

The money earned from newspaper recycling goes directly to each school. Since January 1991, seven million pounds of newspapers have been collected, generating $5,665.38 for the schools.

For the recycling program, schools are grouped according to senior high, junior high, Chapter I elementary and non-Chapter I elementary.

Shooting Victim Dies

At approximately 9:05 p.m. on June 25, police and rescue units responded to a reported gunshot wound victim inside a residence in the 700 block of Biltmore Drive. Upon arriving, the victim, Robert Shannon Briley, 18, of the 3000 block of Delaware Crossing, was found upstairs suffering what appears to be a single gunshot wound to the head.

According to witnesses, the victim and a male friend went upstairs after having consumed alcoholic beverages and LSD. The friend states he handed the victim an empty handgun. At this point the victim made reference to Russian Roulette and placed the gun to his head and fired the gun.

The victim was taken to Virginia Beach General Hospital where he died on June 26.

The witnesses in this matter are cooperating with police in the continuing investigation by members of the department's homicide squad.

Motorcyclist Dies In Crash

On June 27, at 3 p.m. a motorcycle crash occurred 83rd Street and Atlantic Ave.

A 24-year-old Navy man stationed on the U.S.S. Turinga LSD 46 at Metro Machine Yard was north bound on Atlantic Avenue, attempting to follow the curve at 83rd street when the 1982 Kawasaki GPz-750 motorcycle he was operating hit the curb on the right shoulder of the road then went into the guard rail where the drivers head hit a guard rail post. The driver died at the scene from his injuries.

Next of kin have not been notified.

Boy Molested In Bathroom

On June 14, an eight-year-old male was molested while in the restroom of the bowling alley located on Lischelle Place. The suspect allegedly approached the victim in the mens restroom and fondled his genital area. The victim resisted and the suspect fled the area.

The suspect is described as a white male approximately 6' tall with a heavy build. The suspect has dirty blonde hair just over the ears and was wearing a white T-shirt and blue jeans and had a pale complexion.

This incident is being investigated by Det. D.S. Ford of the Investigative Division. Anyone with information is asked to call Crime Solvers at 427-0000.

Alleged Sexual Assaulters Arrested

Two persons were arrested on Tuesday, June 25, in connection with sexual assaults to a ten-year-old Virginia Beach youth.

The suspects allegedly assaulted the victim over a two-year period during which time suspect Anderson shared a residence with the victim.

Dinosaur Exhibit At Central

The Virginia Museum of Natural History's traveling exhibit "Steps in Time," will be on display at the Virginia Beach Central Library from July 2 to August 15.

The exhibit showcases several of the dinosaur tracks that were discovered in the Culpepper Stone Company quarry in Stevensburg, Va.

This discovery elevated the Culpepper site to prominence as one of the most important scientific finds in recent years. In a six-acre site, over 1,500 dinosaur tracks have been exposed. The tracks are estimated to be 210 million years old. The quarry site has been studied by scientists from the museum and the United State Geological Survey.

The Virginia Museum of Natural History is making the information from the quarry site available to all Virginians. The exhibit has been combined with an educational program and is traveling -- museums, schools and libraries around the state as part of the museum's educational outreach. It opened in February 1990, at the General Assembly building in Richmond, when governor Douglas Wilder accepted the dinosaur tracks from Gordon Willis, owner of the quarry.

Admission is free. This is the only Hampton Roads exhibit of "Steps in Time" scheduled for 1991. The Central Library is open from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. Monday through Thursday, and 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Friday and Saturday.

Library Circulation Sky High

Virginia Beach Public Library is experiencing a record-breaking year in circulation of library materials. On June 7, the count surpassed 3 million for FY 90-91.

This figure includes all items checked out (books, audio and video cassettes) from all Virginia Beach libraries (five area libraries, Central, bookmobile, Pungo-Blackwater, Law, Municipal Reference and Special Services, which offers services for the handicapped and a regional library for the blind). All are tied together using the library's microframe-computer system.

In spite of the 24-hour, seven-day demand on the system, library customers have encountered only six hours of downtime this fiscal year. Throughout the night the system is processing data, reports, notices, as well as dial-in access to the library catalog through modems and phone lines.

In August 1990, the city upgraded the library computer system, dramatically improving speed and service.

City Report

Veterans Honored By City

"A Day of Remembrance and Thankfulness" was held recently at the Tidewater Veterans Memorial, across from the Pavillion.

The formal ceremony began with messages presented by Mayor Meyera Oberndorf, Congressman Owen Pickett, and members of the Virginia Beach clergy.

A three-way flyover of F-14As from Oceana Naval Air Station, F-15s from Langley Air Force Base, and a B-52 from Strategic Air Command Barksdale Air Force Base in Louisiana participated in the memorial ceremony.

The B-52, in an effort to salute the Operation Desert Storm participants, opened its bomb bay while flying over a crowd of approximately 300. The Atlantic Fleet Band also performed during the ceremony.

Local military families and area residents were invited to participate in a 12-hour vigil. During the day, small American flags were given to citizens to honor active, deceased or retired members of the military. Over 800 flags were planted around the Tidewater Veterans Memorial where they were left for one week to honor veterans.

Fraternal, veteran and auxiliary groups also participated in the ceremony by laying wreaths in memory of veterans or in honor of active members now serving in the military.

Mock Hurricane Conducted By City Departments

In an annual emergency exercise, the city of Virginia Beach conducted a hurricane operation to test its emergency management plan.

The exercise created a mock hurricane and messages went out to city departments simulating the phases of increased readiness necessary prior to an emergency.

Beginning a week before the scheduled drill, weather messages, including coordinates for the mock Hurricane Helen, were sent to city departments in preparation for the hurricane's arrival. The messages triggered actions that would be needed in the event of an actual storm.

The day before the opening of the emergency operations center, a test of the shelter system occurred at Kellam High School.

Students participated in an evacuation exercise and registered in the shelter to determine if procedures worked effectively. That evening, amateur radio operators who provide back up communications during hurricanes tested their system.

The day of the exercise, the emergency operations center in the basement of the Police Building opened. City departments sent individuals to receive and react to messages on the mock hurricane. A shift change took place and departments had to respond to situations on a real time basis. During a simulated power failure, battery-backup powered the center. The exercise pointed out areas for improvement in existing more positive procedures. A report to the city manager's office will make it possible to update the city's emergency preparedness plan.

Mayor Elected To Chair Group

Mayor Meyera E. Oberndorf has been elected chairman of the Hampton Roads Mayors and Chairs Group for 1992 by the Mayors and Chairs of Boards of Supervisors of the Hampton Roads area.

Oberndorf replaces Mayor James Eason of Hampton, who served from July 1990 through June 1991.

The group includes all 15 jurisdictions from Gloucester County to South Hampton Roads and as far west as Isle of Wight County. Over one-quarter of the Commonwealth of Virginia's population lives within these 15 jurisdictions. The mayors and chairs meet monthly with the chief administrative officer of each jurisdiction to discuss issues of mutual concern.

A priority of the group is the compilation each year of a legislative package for the region. The mayors and chairs have been instrumental in working with the leaders of the Hampton Roads delegation to the General Assembly to move the legislative package forward in the General Assembly.

The mayors and chairs group is also active on the federal level and has addressed such topics as wetlands regulations, transportation funding, medical care and other issues of concern to localities.

For additional information, contact Bob Mathias, director of Intergovernmental Relations for the city of Virginia Beach, at 427-4721.

Locals Named To Girl Scout Board

Five Virginia Beach residents have been elected for two-year terms to the Girl Scout Council of "Colonial Coast" Board of Directors.

Judy Franz, to serve as the council president, is Nova Care's clinical coordinator of occupational therapy services and director of Partical Hospitalization Programs at Tidewater Psychiatric Institute.

Dorothy Barber, Office of Community Relations director with Virginia Beach public schools, will serve as third vice president. Julia Walsh, elected treasurer, is employed by Sovran Bank.

Members-at-large are Vivian Blaize, WGNT-TV account executive, and Keith Snyder, engineering planning supervisor with Newport News Shipbuilding. Elected to the nominating committee of the Board of Directors is Maymie Proctor. Proctor, assistant professor and recruiter of Hampton University School of Nursing, also serves as a member of the Board of Directors.

As Girl Scout board members, this group will help make major policy decisions and govern the member United Way Agency. Girl Scout Council of Colonial Coast serves over 15,500 girls and 5,000 adult volunteers from

AARP Is Rescheduled

The Lynnhaven AARP Chapter's July 7 day trip to Scotland and Barksdale Dinner Theatre has been rescheduled to August 8. The trip will depart from the Great Neck Recreation Center at 1:30 p.m. on August 8, returning late that same night.

First stop will be Scotchtown, home of Patrick Henry during his term as governor of Virginia. It was during this time he made his famous "Give Me Liberty or Give Me Death" speech at St. John's Church in Richmond. The group will then have dinner and see a musical production at the Barksdale Dinner Theatre in nearby Hanover, the country's first dinner theatre.

The site was once Hanover Tavern, operated as a stage coach stop and owned by John Shelton, whose daughter later became Patrick Henry's wife and first Lady of Virginia.

The trip, including deluxe motor coach transportation, tour escort, admissions, taxes, tips and travel refreshments, will cost $52 per person. Interested persons may contact Barbara Earnhardt at 496-3714 or Erma Rice at 428-5480.

The excursion is open to all adults. AARP membership is not required though participants are welcome to join any area chapter. Church groups and area clubs are invited to attend. Reservations must be made by July 8.

Satsang Society To Meet

The Virginia Satsang Society (Hampton Roads), a chartered affiliate of Eckankar Worship Service, will meet on July 2 at 11 a.m. at the Virginia Beach Pavilion Mezzanine Room.

Window Cleaning Done Quick And Safe

After Virginia Beach residents emerge from winter, what is your first view of those summer clean-up chores awaiting? How much time and money are you going to have to spend cleaning and painting those ugly windows, instead of taking the family on that long-promised picnic?

If you have aluminum windows, you can go ahead and bring the picnic basketball down from the attic. You won't be spending much time

No matter what your windows are... they will need cleaning once in a while.

Good-Bye, Old Paint
Aluminum windows are factory prefinished with durable baked-on enamel, much like your car's finish - or with anodized finishes that are actually part of the metal itself. Over decades of exposure to harsh weather extremes, such finishes won't peel, flake, crack, blister or rust.

made of or how old they are, they will need cleaning once in a while. Rain spots and dust accumulate to ruin the view from the inside as well as from the outside. Aluminum windows, however, help you make short work of this seasonal chore.

Frames made of smooth, durable enamel or anodized finishes rarely need cleaning at all. Dust and spots don't stick to them very easily, and they will not stain. If they do need cleaning, a damp cloth or paper towel with a little ordinary soap and water if you're really thorough - handles the job easily.

Some modern window designs also feature tilt-in sashes to make cleaning as easy as a summer breeze. There's no need to trust that rickety ladder, keep that garden hose under control or tromp around in the muddy flower beds. Simply turn the special latches and let the sash tilt inward. You can clean the glass and framework easily and quickly (so no sootling of safety), all from inside the house.

Aluminum windows can go a long way toward making the living easy when it comes to summertime clean-up!

Burns. "Basically, it all started for the fun of it."

Now, ECSC attracts between 350 to 500 participants and about 20,000 to 30,000 spectators throughout the course of the weekend. Last year, the event was held on 1st to 5th Street, but this year Burns said she hopes to expand to 8th Street.

"There's just crowds, there's nowhere to walk," she said.

Virginia Beach Jaycees will begin the event by setting up the beach on Thursday night. Friday morning, preliminary surfing, skinboarding and skateboarding competitions will be held. That night, a kick-off party will be held on the beach.

On Saturday, those same events will continue, as well as volleyball, windsurfing and tug-of-war contests. A 5-K run has been added this year, and the bikini and "best bod" contests will be held once again.

On Sunday, the contest finals will be held and awards will be given out. The event is expected to be over by 6 p.m. on Sunday.

"It brings people down to the beach. It's the last event of the summer; the end of the vacation season," said Burns.

Burns said the Jaycees raise an average of $20,000 from the event. All of the money goes back into the community, however, whether it be by sending handicapped children to camp or donating to the homeless, she said.

Bloom and Burns said they spend most of their evenings working on the ECSC project and a few hours during the day. The two have found that they are learning a lot in the process.

"There are long hours and it takes a lot of time, but it's fun because what you're working for," said Bloom, an Oceanfront resident.

Bloom added that she became more motivated about the project when things began to fall into place.

Almost 30 years ago, when the Jaycees first decided to try and hold a surfing contest, they had no idea that it would blossom into such a popular event, Burns said. So, she said, she expects that ECSC will become even bigger in years to come.

"The Jaycees said, 'okay, the Greensboro Jaycees have turned their golf tournament into the Greensboro open,'" said Burns. "That's where we think the ECSC ought to go."

School, eclipses are caused by the rotation of the earth, moon and sun. It can be determined mathematically how often the three bodies will line up.

"It's a glorious sight. You just go all out to pieces. You're just gaga; you want to look at it," said Blackwell. "When the moon totally eclipses the sun, you can see pink to red flares firing off the limb of the sun."

Not only is Blackwell going to admire the eclipse's beauty, but he going because this eclipse is supposed to be one of the longest in history. It is expected to last about seven minutes, he said.

"I hope to view it and photograph it," he said. "Once you've seen it, it's pretty awesome."

Blackwell will bring with him a telescope with a camera attached to it, so he can take pictures while he is observing.

Imogene Hitt, an 82-year-old Kempsville resident, will also make the trip to Mexico. But she's not going just to see the eclipse; she's going to enjoy her vacation. Hitt's son, who is the director of the Chesapeake planetarium, has presented her with the trip as an 83rd birthday present.

"He'd like for me to go on a trip and I've always wanted to go to Mexico," said Hitt, who remembers the eclipse of 1970.

"It'll be bigger, better and clearer. I'll be a scientific trip."

For those who will witness the eclipse, there are several precautions that they must take. It can be very damaging to the eyes to look directly at the sun without eye protection even if the sun is partially eclipsed by the moon. The sun or eclipse can be observed safely using indirect viewing methods or by looking through a filter that is safe for direct solar viewing.

One of the safest ways to view an eclipse, according to Hanna, is through pinhole projection. By punching a hole in a piece of cardboard and focusing it on a white piece of paper, the image of the eclipse will appear on the white paper. It is safe to look at the sun only when the moon is totally in front of it, he said.

"Nobody should ever look at the sun. But, I don't think this will be dramatic enough to worry about," said Ellis.

Ellis suggested laying a sheet on the ground so the eclipse can reflect off of it.

"I don't think it'll be anything to rave about," she said. "It might be nothing more than a cloud passing over."

The next total eclipse visible from this area will not occur until 2017.

I sincerely hope these conditions never have to be experienced again. During 1980, the citizens responded overwhelmingly to our call to save water. Since that time there have been other occasions when we have had to ask citizens to voluntarily conserve water. Thankfully, you responded accordingly.

Having safe adequate water supplies is something Virginia Beach does not take for granted, and because of this I know you will heed our plea to help conserve this precious resource.

For information concerning water conservation, call the Virginia Beach Department of Public Utilities at 427-4631.

everyone's support.

So, what do you think of the superintendent? I think he made an excellent first impression. In conversations with individual School Board members, I sensed a genuine pride that he was chosen. They truly seemed excited that they had found a leader who would do a great job as superintendent of schools. As always, time will tell, but it is safe to say that I and the rest of VBEA's leadership team will do all that we can to work with new superintendent. In the final analysis, his success will be our success since we have the same goals.

shouldn't be afraid that there's a satanic group running through their area."

Youell said that there should be more police patrolling the neighborhood.

"The only solution now is to get one of those brick covered mailboxes," said the unidentified woman. "They just don't have enough police to be vigilantes. It's up to us neighbors to unite."

a full freezer will stay frozen for about two days; in half-full freezers food will remain frozen for about one day.

Several things influence how long food will be safe: Operating temperature of the refrigerator or freezer. The colder it was, the longer food will be safe.

Room temperature. High temperatures will speed the thawing.

Door openings. The open door lets out cold air and lets in warm air.

Nature of the food. Many foods stored in the refrigerator are not very perishable - pickles, catsup, jelly, flour, bread, beverages in bottles or cans - and they should be safe to eat even if the power is off for several hours.

Fresh fruits and vegetables stored in the refrigerator may lose quality - wilt, discolor, or soften - but will be safe to eat, according to the service.

Fresh meats, poultry, fish, milk and eggs are the foods of greatest concern.

Likewise, many foods in the freezer are not very perishable - nuts, popcorn, bread, jam, cookies, dried fruits and vegetables - and will be safe to eat.

Fruits and vegetables will lose quality but most will be safe to eat. Meats, poultry, and fish are quite perishable but fortunately they are the last to thaw.

Discard any food that has warmed to room temperature and stayed there for two hours or more, said Jo Anne Barton, an extension specialist.

Food that has only partially thawed can be refrozen. It will still be safe but it might be lower in quality.

If in doubt, throw it out. It's better to be safe than sorry. Myra Polnick said the last time her refrigerator went on the brink, she had just recently gone to a fresh produce market. To save perishing berries, she made jam. To save her vegetables, she chopped them up and made stew.

A little resourcefulness never hurt anybody. K.L.H.

its business in May, June and July and that Florida and California which have the worst drought situations, never restrict pools. They like to have them available for fire fighting.

J. Michael Kenney, the owner of a pool business, said that one filling is good for ten years. He said that he lost $80,000 in business last week alone.

Watts said that the amended ordinance provides for changes to accommodate the conditions throughout the summer at specific times. He said that he was well aware of the concern of the pool industry, but that the rain did not descend on the entire area equally.

Councilwoman Reba McClanahan asked whether the city was addressing concerns in the city's hotels and motels, whether the customers were being made aware of the situation.

Watts replied that in 1981 the city did a number of things, such as preparing pamphlets for distribution in hotels and motels. He said that the city will seek the cooperation of the industry.

Watts said that during the 1980-81 drought, the city saw a significant use of wells, that water levels were lower than but that if the area experiences three and four weeks of high temperatures, a tremendous amount of water will be lost to evaporation.

The ordinance adopted declares an emergency to exist as a reason for the restriction. Councilman James W. Brazier asked whether the declaration of an emergency was necessary when "I haven't seen anything to suggest we're in an emergency."

Watts replied that the declaration of an emergency was part of the state's enabling legislation which permits localities to impose restrictions.

Mayor Meyers Oberdorf added that voluntary conservation did not create enough of a surplus. She also pointed out that while many neighborhoods were inundated with rain, the rain did not fall in the Isle of Wight where Norfolk's reservoirs are located.

Dance For Handicapped Set

A dance for physically and mentally handicapped people will be held on Saturday, July 20 from 6:30 to 9:30 p.m. at the Bow Creek Recreation Center, 3427 Clubhouse Road.

The dance will be sponsored by the Harry Baird family, the Virginia Beach Department of Parks and Recreation, and CLASP (Citizens Loving All Special People).

Participation is free. Refreshments will be served and door prizes will be given. The latest hits will be played. Parents and guardians are welcome, however, chaperones are present at all times.

Transportation is available through TRT from areas at $7 per roundtrip per individual. CLASP must know by July 1 if anyone desires transportation.

For further information call Harry Baird on 486-3110.

Labor Day '91 - Are We Ready?

City Entertainment Planned; Not Just For College Students

By Karen Dalrymple
Staff Writer

Once again, the city of Virginia Beach has planned extensively for Labor Day weekend. But, this year, unlike the last, the events planned are not geared directly toward college students.

Last year, the city formed a Labor Day Task Force, whose job was to communicate Laborfest plans with the public. Laborfest, formerly called Greekfest, was the name given to the annual fraternity and sorority party attracting mostly black college students from across the nation.

The city prepared for last year's crowds by planning entertainment at Red Wing Park, issuing driving passes to residents as well as tourists entering the resort area, and blocking off streets. These plans were a result of Greekfest '89, where riots broke out and the masses of black youth were blamed.

Laborfest '90 was pulled off without a hitch. No one was hurt, no damage was done to Oceanfront property and the students seemed to have a good time. This year, another eventful weekend is planned, but the city has more than just the college students in mind.

"What we've done for Labor Day weekend is put together a package where everyone will have a good time. We're trying to be everything to everybody," said Tracy Halman, executive director of Ocean Occasions/Beach Events, which has been retained by the city to supply seasonal entertainment.

Three stages will be set up - on 14th, 24th and 31st Streets - where various forms of music, including salsa, beach music, Top 40, rhythm and blues, gospel, reggae, steel drum and acoustic, will be performed throughout the weekend. A parade will be held along Atlantic Avenue Friday (July 30) night and the East Coast Volleyball Championships will be held Saturday, Sunday and Monday on 2nd through 6th Streets.

Fireworks will light up the skies Saturday night and the powerboat races, which were cancelled over Memorial Day weekend due to bad weather, will be held on Sunday. The Virginia Beach Marine Tournament, which offers a purse of $50,000, will be held all weekend.

"Labor Day weekend to us is just like Memorial Day or the Fourth of July. We have to make sure people come to town and leave with a good feeling," said Halman.

It is not known whether or not the college students will return to the Oceanfront this Labor Day.

There have been no calls made by college organizations confirming whether the end-of-the-summer bash will take place again this year. The term "Laborfest" has even been dropped from the city's vocabulary. The weekend is now being called the Virginia Beach Labor Day Weekend Celebration, Halman said.

"We expect that there'll be college students visiting the beach and we hope that there will be," said Michael Barrett, co-chairman of the city's summer events liaison committee, which reviewed the Beach Events program to ensure that it has planned multi-racial activities.

Barrett reinforced that the city has planned entertainment that will appeal to all walks of life. He said that the city is prepared for Labor Day weekend, as it is for all holiday weekends.

We foresee an excellent weekend with plenty of activities planned. It's important to look at the program in the context of the whole summer," he said. "We're a resort destination. Our surveys say people want something to do."

Barrett added that tourists are pleased with the activities that have been planned thus far this summer and the fact that they are not aimed towards one particular ethnic group. The resort area is having an excellent year, he said; more people are returning to the beach and the merchants are happy. Therefore, he said, it is the city's responsibility to plan events that will keep people here.

Though a Labor Day Task Force was not formed this year, Barrett, who is also on the Ocean Occa-

Debra Loudermilk is not content; she's just extremely self-confident. And, the Glenwood resident hopes to use that personality trait on July 13 and 14 to win her the title of Mrs. Virginia.

A 1980 Kellam High School graduate, Loudermilk is no stranger to recognition. During her senior year, she was crowned homecoming queen and placed second runner-up in the Virginia Beach Junior Miss pageant. She was also a cheerleader for three years.

Now, ten years later, Loudermilk has two years of college under her belt, has gotten married and given birth to a child, and has become the business manager for her family's janitorial contracting business. These accomplishments are what Loudermilk hopes to stress to pageant judges.

"Patriotism is booming now. Virginia needs a representative made out of something America was founded on - loyalty and a strong sense of family," said Loudermilk. "I feel I'd represent Virginia well as Mrs. Virginia." Loudermilk heard of the pageant through the daily newspaper. Once she submitted her photo, she was called and interviewed over the phone. The next step was to acquire sponsors, of which Loudermilk currently has ten.

During the pageant, she will participate in a swimsuit and evening gown competition and a personal interview. There is no talent competition. Loudermilk said she is looking forward to the personal interview, which takes place before a contestant is presented to the audience.

"The judges can get to see the inner beauty before they see you all dressed up," she said. "We always been fascinated by pageants or anything that allows me to show people what I'm made of." Loudermilk specifically wants to show the judges that she is made of the basics, or what this state was founded on, she said. She is proud of her good character, spirituality, personality and confidence. She also prides herself on being a good wife and mother, at the same time juggling a career.

"I think I have all the ingredients to fill the position," she said. "I want them to see what a working mom/wife is like."

Cooler Temperature May Make For A Better Beachfest

V.B. Rescue Squad
Event To Help In Recruitment Efforts

By Karen Dalrymple
Staff Writer

Hopefully it won't be as hot this July 13 as it was last year. Temperatures were well past the 100-degree mark during the Virginia Beach Rescue Squad's second annual Beachfest.

This year, squad members are hoping for a little cooler weather; they might even settle for a breeze. That way, more people would turn out for the event, which attracted about 1,700 last year.

The event, which will be held at the 24th Street Park, is in its third year. The purpose of the day is to raise money to benefit the Virginia Beach Rescue Squad's recruitment programs.

"I thought it would be nice to have an event that was fun and also to make money for the squad at the same time," said Herb Maher, Beachfest chairman and Virginia Beach Rescue Squad life member.

The event has been held at various locations in the past, including Camp Pendleton and Beach Garden Park. The squad decided to hold the event at 24th Street to give participants the opportunity to utilize the ocean, though Maher said the squad is not encouraging alcohol and swimming.

The event will feature a variety of foods, beverages, including beer and wine, valet bicycle parking, T-shirt sales and live entertainment. Local bands, Savannah and Fantasy, will perform during the day and at night.

"They're real hot. We were fortunate enough to get them," said Maher. He added that they bands reduced their fees 50 percent to help out the rescue squad.

Other organizations have also lent their support for the event. The Virginia Beach Sheriff's Department loaned the squad a tent at no charge, and inmates will set up the grounds, erect signs and a fence and clean up afterwards, Maher said.

"The community here really supports the rescue squad," he said. "They have no idea that it's all vol-cue Squad, one of 11 in the city, is sponsoring the event, the proceeds will benefit all the squads, which function solely on monetary donations.

"No rescue squad can fight it by themselves. We've got to pull together. This is our donation to the system," said Maher.

The city's emergency medical service system is the largest all-volunteer system in the United States. According to Rick Schoew, Beachfest co-chairman, the system saves the city $7.2 million a year in services, and saves the taxpayers millions because there are no salaries to pay.

The Virginia Beach squad, which currently has 84 volunteers, responded to 7,200 calls last year.

That's one-third of the total number of calls, 22,000, dispatched to the city's squads. The Oceanfront squad covers the area from Dum Neck to Fort Story and from the Oceanfront, west to Great Neck Road.

Though Beachfest hasn't really raised much money in the past - the squad broke even - Maher said he hopes to raise between $5,000 and $10,000 this year. The squad will not charge the $5 admission fee as they have in the past, but they have cut down on expenses such as a sky diving show.

"It's an opportunity to come out and have fun," said Schoew. "We think that this year will be our biggest and best year as an event and for the money we raise."

Aubrey Watts Steps Down As City Manager

Council Divided On Employees' Early Retirement Plan

By Lee Cahill
City Council Reporter

Aubrey W. Watts, Jr., has resigned as Virginia Beach city manager, taking advantage of the city's early retirement program.

It happened just like Councilman John A. Baum said several weeks ago when council adopted the early retirement plan for city employees - the live one retire. At the time Baum had said that the only problem with an early retirement plan, a method used by the private sector sometimes as well as government to thin ranks and save money, is that "the live ones retire and the dead ones don't."

At the executive session last week, when Watts announced his resignation to council, Baum reported that one of the council members said, "I hate early retirement," and Baum replied, "Didn't I tell you?"

"Watts is one of the live ones," Baum said after the meeting. "We're going to have a real problem," said Baum, finding a replacement.

Replacement. That's another problem with an early retirement plan. When the plan was adopted, Watts informed council that the program would save the city money only if a number of those who retire are not replaced. Watts definitely will have to be replaced.

Watts, who is 50, said that the first time he revealed his retirement plans to anyone was at the executive session. He said that even his wife did not know for sure, although they had been talking about it for for early retirement."

But Watts is not retiring in the traditional sense. He doesn't plan to sit on the front porch. He said that another career, another occupation is definitely in the future although he said he'd manage to fit in a little leisure first.

He said that Virginia Beach is his home, that he loved the city, but that 28 years is a long time. He said that he the past week. He called her after he told council, he said. Baum said that Watts felt that it was unethical and unprofessional to tell anybody before his employers. His staff was in the dark, too.

After Watts made the public announcement of his resignation, Mayor Meyera Oberndorf said that the Council "accepted Mr. Watts' resignation with deepest regrets. During his 28 years of public service in Virginia Beach, Mr. Watts displayed the highest degree of integrity, intellect and genuine concern for the citizens of Virginia Beach. Dignity isn't easy to achieve when a city manager and City Council part company - take the forced resignation of Watts' one-time boss, George Hanbury when reporters were paning outside the doors of the council conference room waiting for a word out of an executive session.

Laborfest

Is It Over With?

Well, it looks like the college student gathering better known as Laborfest has come to an end. With Labor Day weekend less than two months away, the city has no plans to cater to the predominantly black crowd, as it did last year.

Sure, plenty of events are planned; there will be various forms of entertainment the entire weekend, but none of them are geared directly toward the college students. Last year, the city spent millions of dollars on the planning and organizing of an event catering specifically to the students.

Because of all the turmoil caused during Greekfest '89, when riot squads and the National Guard were called in to stop looters and vandals, the city tried to prepare itself for next year's crowds. Streets were blocked off, residents as well as tourists were required to have passes to enter the resort area, and a festival was held at Red Wing Park. Instead of riots, the city got a fairly calm, quiet weekend, even though the students arrived in hoards. But, the students didn't appreciate what the city had planned. They were only allowed to "party" at Red Wing, without alcohol, and they were not permitted to drive their own cars; shuttles were provided. In a way, they were secluded from the rest of the city's thousands of tourists.

This year, it seems that the college students have no intentions of holding their annual end-of-the-summer bash in Virginia Beach. If they do, the city is not aware of it. It's not that they students are unwanted. The city has just chosen to provide a fun, holiday weekend for all its visitors, not just the students. The entertainment that is planned will appeal to all walks of life. There will be reggae bands, rhythm and blues, beach music, and rock and roll - something for everyone.

So, if the students plan to come, there will be plenty for them to do, only they won't be told where and when to go and how to get there. They are free to enjoy the beach as are any other tourists.

It seems that the city is prepared for the holiday weekend and has a positive feeling about it. With two years of wondering how the weekend will go, it looks like the Oceanfront is back to normal and everyone who visits it this year will enjoy themselves. - K.L.D.

Beachfest

Support The Rescue Squad

Virginia Beach residents looking for a good time should definitely attend the Virginia Beach Rescue Squad's Beachfest. The outdoor party will be held on July 13 at the 24th Street Park. It will feature food, bands, alcoholic and non-alcoholic beverages and lots of sun and surf.

Because it is held so close to the ocean, the event is easily accessible by bicycle. Those cruising along the boardwalk can stop and have their bikes valet parked. The event is free and those who attend can stay as long as they like.

The proceeds from the event will be used to benefit the city's rescue squads. Since they operate solely on donations, the money will be used for recruitment efforts and new equipment.

The Beachfest should be a fun event. Those who attend will be donating to a very worthwhile cause. Without the rescue squads, there would be a lot less lives saved in this city. All of the rescue squad members are volunteers, so they provide their services out of the goodness of their hearts. The least the residents can do is show a little appreciation by stopping by Beachfest for a good time. - K.L.D.

Mrs. Virginia

Good Luck Debra!

Virginia Beach's own Debra Loudermilk will compete in the Mrs. Virginia pageant this weekend in Richmond. Loudermilk, a wife, mother and career woman, hopes to "wow" the judges with her loyalty, sense of family pride and her ability to juggle her home life and her professional life.

Loudermilk is not a typical pageant contestant. She is not entering to show off her face or figure; she wants the judges to see the real her, her inner beauty. Loudermilk hopes to win the pageant and go on to the Mrs. America contest. It would be quite an honor to have a Virginia Beach resident representing the state.

Good luck to Loudermilk! May she make the city, as well as her family, proud. - K.L.D.

Is Therapy "Trendy"?

No, But It's A Last Resort

Marriage counseling, emotional, psychological and sex therapy, drug and alcohol detoxification - some people nowadays say that to participate in such activities is "trendy."

No, it's not cool to have problems, and yes, sometimes outside clinical help is needed. But those who think going for treatment is in vogue or stylish are only trying to put a positive spin on a negative situation.

Of course, that's better than losing all hope, or not taking any measures at all to try to make a bad situation better. - G.D.G.

Live Music Commentary

The Baddest Bassist To Hit The Beach!

The Fourth of July... fireworks... celebration... you better believe it, and the biggest fireworks were on stage at the Peppermint Beach Club. I was lucky enough to witness the best concert of the year so far, and I doubt seriously if any in the future could top this.

On That Note!

By Sammy Harrell

What do you get when you take the best bass guitarist on Planet Earth, add three equally talented musicians from the top rock and roll bands in the United States, and turn them loose on stage with the freedom to play the way they want? You get the Urge, and I do mean you get it!

I am still getting adrenaline shivers from this concert and it will be awhile before I come back to normal.

Stu Hamm, bassist with Joe Satriani and Steve Vai, recently formed this group, and what a lineup. Alex Skolnic on lead guitar from Testament, Ron Kiddle on drums from Blue Oyster Cult and Jimmy Yaeger from Cyndi Lauper and Ozzy Osbourne. Now, one would think this to be a highly unlikely combination of players, but it's this unique mixture, I think, that makes this so incredibly dynamic.

So many people try to pigeon-hole a musician's style, or force them into a narrow category, but these guys have broken out of the mold and turned on the heat. I truly sympathize with all of you who missed this one, because you really, really missed it.

Bass guitar has always been relegated to the background in music, with occasional bursts of a solo here or there, or a sometimes smattering of melodic passages becoming an integral part of a song; but never has the bass been brought to the forefront until Mr. Hamm came along. Oh sure, you have Jaco, Stanley Clarke, Patuucci, among others, but this guy does things with the instrument once undreamed of.

He lays down a mean groove and plays a bottom line with his left hand, while playing harmonic and melodic counterpoint with his right hand, and it sounds like he has four hands. I watched closely, being a bass player myself, and was thoroughly enthralled by what he was doing. I'm still practicing hard trying to figure out how he does it.

I spoke with Stu prior to the show and he said, "This is the greatest band I've ever played in, and wait'll you hear us play; we'll smoke you." No boasting here, but an understatement of a blistering performance that still has me smoldering.

Alex Skolnic showed that he was capable of far greater and wider ranging expression than anything he has done with Testament. I mean, I've seen Testament, but he was forced to play within the parameters of the music as opposed to being set free to express himself. He plays fusion with finesse and intense emotion, more dynamically than Vai or Satriani. I know you J.S. fans think I'm cooked, but for those who were there that I spoke with after the show, they agreed with me. Alex is a premier guitarist of the highest degree and I foresee great things coming from this guy.

Ron the drummer from B.O.C., the cute guy all the girls swoon over, is no ordinary rock drummer. Sure he sounds great with B.O.C. but here is another case of monster musician breaking free of his chains and stretching out to prove he can groove. He and Stu worked so well together it sounded like they had performed with each other forever. It is my understanding that they only had less than a week's rehearsal before the tour began, but hearing them, you would never know it.

Jimmy Yaeger added the final touch with some of the most tasteful and understated keyboard work I've heard. When Stu would be playing up high on the neck of his bass, Jimmy was subtly holding down the bottom with his left hand while adding bursts of embellishment with his right. He played just the right stuff and rounded out the sound perfectly.

A lot of time, when you see musicians of this calibre, there is a lot of "too busy" playing going on; which makes for a cacophony of clashing notes, but not with these guys. They all complemented each other so well, that it seems obvious that this is a match made in heaven that has no where to go but upward and onward.

I'm hoping this band goes into the studio together, because they have some true musical magic to offer, and with the sad state of the music business these days, it is something sorely needed.

I've been telling you how great these guys play together, but I didn't tell you what a bunch of nice guys they are. After the show, I was lucky enough to talk with each of them, and there was no sign of "Rock-star-itis" in any of them. They are the type of people you'd want to invite to your house if you were having a party, because they are all brimming over with genuine enthusiasm and personality. We all got together and went to the Pavilion Athletic Club after the show to wind down and had a really good time.

I asked them if they liked Virginia Beach and they said, "We love this town," and they're looking forward to coming back. I wish they'd come back next week, because I could never get enough of listening to their music. They take you on a trip through funk, rock, jazz and even a smidgeon of blue grass. (Stu's Flat and Scruggs bass solo was great) and they don't let you off until you've had the joy ride of a lifetime.

By the way, Stu Hamm can sing, too, something you wouldn't have been aware of had you not been there for yourself, ripping on "The Urge" (theme song?) and "If You're Scared, Stay Home." I ain't scared at all, now that I know the future of music looks so bright with these guys in the forefront.

You gotta go buy Stu Hamm's records if you want to hear something truly brilliant and innovative, and you will be enlightened, I guarantee.

I can't finish this without telling you about the opening act, Sea of Souls. This was only their second performance, having just recently formed.

Andrew McNeely, bassist and lead singer said, "I wanted to start fresh, and play all original music, because I was getting bored with the same old stuff." There was nothing boring about these guys.

Don Campbell on lead guitar, Bill Adams on drums, and Stu Bryson on keyboards put on a great show of originals that went from melancholy and dark, to bright and up beat. No two songs sounded alike, which happens much too often with lots of other bands.

I was impressed with these guys and I hope they can garner the local support as well as generate some label interest so they can get their product heard.

Invisible Force Productions coordinated the show and did a great job. I'm

Miss Virginia/USA Sought

The annual search is on, the Virginia Beach community has learned, to find Miss Virginia/USA 1992, the young woman who will represent Virginia in the annual Miss USA Pageant national telecast on CBS-TV with a prize package valued in excess of $250,000.

The Virginia finals will be held at the new Waterside Marriott Hotel the weekend of Nov. 9 and 10.

To qualify, applicants must be single, never married, a Virginia resident (colleges and military bases accepted) at least 18 and under 27 years of age as of Feb. 1, 1992. They can not be or have been a parent.

Judging will be based on beauty of face and figure, poise, personality, grooming, street intelligence, and commercial appeal. There is no talent competition.

Prospective entrants should send their name, address, age and phone to Dixie Penner, entries director, Miss Virginia/USA Pageant, 11259-D Lockwood Drive, Silver Spring, Md. 20901, or they may call toll free anytime at 1-800-BEAUTY.

The pageant is being produced by American Pageants Inc. For the 27th consecutive year.

The reigning Miss Virginia/USA is Traci Dority, a 24-year-old graduate of James Madison University, now an assistant television producer with Washington, D.C. public relations firm.

Heritage Antique Show Slated

The Pavilion will again be the site of the 22nd Annual Virginia Beach Heritage Antiques Show on July 18, 19, 20, and 21.

Exhibitors participating in this show will be coming from California, Connecticut, Delaware, Florida, Georgia, Louisiana, Maryland, Missouri, New Jersey, New York, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Texas, Virginia and the District of Columbia, many of whom are only seen in this show during the year.

They will offer for sale an extensive variety of 18th and 19th century American, English, French and oriental period and country furniture and accessories including heirloom silver, cut glass, woodenware, art glass, fine linens, Art Deco, a silver matching service, antique and estate jewelry, American and European porcelain, paintings, and much more.

Visa and Mastercard will be honored at most booths and a $25 gift certificate, redeemable at any booth during the show, will be awarded daily.

Show hours will be from 11 a.m. to 8:30 p.m. on Thursday, Friday and Saturday and from 1 p.m. to 6 p.m. on Sunday.

There is ample free parking at the Pavilion and a snack bar will be open during show hours.

VB Pops Changes Name, Home

The Virginia Beach Pops recently changed its name to "Orchestra of Virginia Beach," with Walter Noona continuing as music director, relocating to a larger office in the Pavilion Center in Virginia Beach; and installing a new president of the board of directors.

The name change was among a series of recommendations resulting from an extensive marketing study sanctioned by the board of directors.

The orchestra's new and larger home is located in the Pavilion Center across from the Virginia Beach Pavilion. The orchestra will present at least six classical and popular concerts there during the coming season.

Robert Dedman of Virginia Beach becomes the new president of the board of directors as the orchestra enters its ninth season.

The Most Beautiful City

Operation Sunburst is a program challenging residents, businesses, schools and local organization to plant ten Carlton daffodil bulbs for each person in Virginia Beach. Our goal is to have 4,000,000 daffodils planted in the fall so in the spring we can have a burst of sunshine throughout the city.

To encourage citizens to get involved in the city's Appearance Task Force Program, the Virginia Beach's Hampton Roads Chamber of Commerce is helping us with Adopt-A-Daffodil-Bed Program. We are asking for groups to maintain existing daffodil beds so they will look nice all year round. To continue this burst of sunshine throughout the growing season, we are recommending groups to plant yellow flowers in the beds with the daffodils.

Flowers to try are Daylilies, Canna Lilies, Marigolds, Rudbeckia or Chrysanthemums. By planting these flowers, they will hide the leaves dy-

Holding America Accountable

This week's Sun article was written by Keith Geiger, NEA president. It says that America will reach the six national education goals adopted in 1990 by President Bush and the governors? Is it possible that we'll achieve educational excellence for all America by the year 2000?

Reasons for hope abound. There is close to universal agreement that it's time to get on with the job of restructuring the nation's schools. And important restructuring efforts are under way in schools all across the country. The National Governors' Association has kept education at the top of its agenda. And last month, President George Bush put the immense power of his office at work for school improvement.

On April 18, President Bush unveiled America 2000, his administration's education strategy. And he said unequivocally, that education is an issue for all America: "Think about every problem,

So let us set standards for student achievement in school. And let us also set standards for taking care of America's children and preparing them for learning.

every challenge we face. The solution to each start with education."

More than that, President Bush challenged all America to take responsibility for education: "It's time we hold our schools - and ourselves - accountable."

And this is where reasons for doubt can overwhelm hope. Stories about strategies for improving schools appear in the same newspapers

Employees Welcomed On Flag Day

To celebrate Flag Day, June 14, the city of Virginia Beach and the local chapters of the Daughters of the American Revolution (DAR) sponsored a homecoming event for city employees who served in operations Desert Shield and Desert Storm, and honored a special Vietnam veteran.

Cathy Foussekis, regent of the Lynnhaven Parish Chapter and a city employee in the Department of Human Resources, coordinated the event and presided at the ceremony. She noted that this was the fourth Flag Day ceremony at the city's Flag Square, and the bicentennial year of the Bill of Rights which guarantees the freedoms for which the flag stands.

Others who participated in the program were the Honorable Meyera Oberndorf, mayor; Aubrey V. Watts, Jr., city manager; DAR regents Roberta Smith, Francis Land Chapter; Louise Wicker, Adam Thoroughgood Chapter; and Bunny Walsh, Princess Anne County Chapter. A Virginia Beach police honor guard raised the flag to open the ceremony, and Chrysalis

Strawbridge School Opens

The Virginia Beach public schools' newest elementary school, Strawbridge, opened for registration July 1.

Families new to Virginia Beach living in the Strawbridge Elementary attendance zone may register their children at the school Monday through Thursday from 7 a.m. to 5 p.m., through August 16.

The school is located at 2553 Strawbridge Road behind the Strawbridge Marketplace on General Booth Boulevard. The school's telephone number is 427-5562.

The Strawbridge Elementary attendance zone, which was approved by the Virginia Beach School Board recently, includes the subdivisions of Hunt Club Forest, Strawbridge, Dunwoody, Gunn Hall Manor and Upton Estates. For specific information about the Strawbridge attendance zone, telephone the school or the office of pupil services at 427-4791.

Students living in the Strawbridge attendance zone who are already registered at Ocean Lakes, Red Mill, or Princess Anne elementary schools will automatically have their records transferred to Strawbridge Elementary.

Olivia Dabney, former principal of Point O'View Elementary School, has assumed leadership of the new 900-student school.

School Lunch Prices Increase

The Virginia Beach School Board has approved an increase in the price of school lunches for the 1991-92 school year. Elementary students will pay $1 for a lunch, secondary students will pay $1.10, and adults will pay $1.75 when school starts in September.

School breakfast prices will increase to 60 cents for both elementary and secondary students and to 80 cents for adults.

The new prices are for one student meal per student. If students want to purchase any additional food items, they will be charged on an a la carte basis.

Through a special milk program, afternoon kindergarten students will be able to purchase milk for seven cents and a snack for 15 cents. The reduced milk price is available only to afternoon kindergartners because each elementary school now offers a breakfast program. Morning kindergarten students will have to pay 25 cents for milk and 15 cents for a snack.

Reduced price and tree breakfasts and lunches are available to students who qualify under the federal lunch program. Information on free and reduced price school meals and application forms will be sent home with students at the beginning of the school year.

Safe Boating Week Named

Mayor Meyera Oberndorf recently issued the following proclamation:

Whereas: More than 70 million Americans will choose recreational boating as a way to relax in 1991 and, unfortunately, tragedies will occur on the water;

Whereas: Responsible boat operators learn about their boats, safety equipment, and the environment in which they operate, enabling them to understand their own abilities and limitations;

Whereas: In recognizing that hundreds of lives could be saved each year by spreading safe boating information to the public, the Congress of the United States requested the president proclaim, annually, one week as National Safe Boating Week;

Whereas: As, citizens of Virginia Beach, affirm and support these goals;

Now, therefore, I, Meyera E. Oberndorf, mayor of the city of Virginia Beach, do hereby proclaim: June 2 through 8, 1991 National Safe Boating Week in Virginia Beach and urge all citizens who use our waterways to acquire skills and knowledge to maintain their own safety and that of those around them.

Karroll Enters Beach Practice

Craig A. Karroll, M.D., son of Leonard and Gloria Karroll, of Chesterfield, Mo., has completed a psychiatric residency in the Karl Menninger School of Psychiatry and Mental Health Sciences. He will enter private practice in Virginia Beach.

Karroll was one of 24 persons honored at a recent graduation ceremony. The Menninger School offers programs in general psychiatry, child psychiatry, forensic psychiatry, postdoctoral clinical psychology, post-master's social work, and an international training program for mental health professionals from abroad.

Karroll received his undergraduate and medical education at the University of Missouri at Kansas City.

Tripodi On Evansville List

Matthew Tripodi, a University of Evansville student from Virginia Beach, is among approximately 660 students at UE named to the Dean's List for outstanding academic achievement during the 1990-91 spring semester.

This is the eighth time Tripodi has been named to this list. He is the son of George Tripodi.

Kempsville Band Attends Clinic

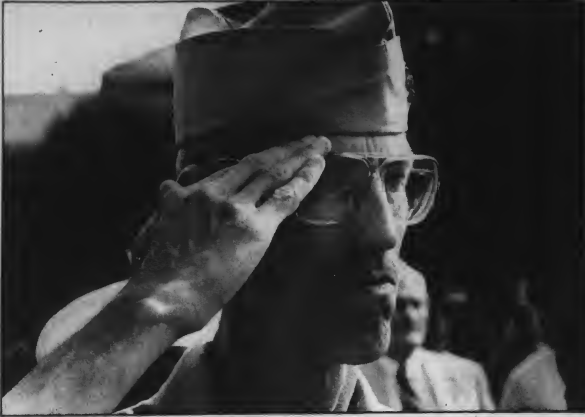

The Kempsville Junior High School band, under the leadership of Dwight E. Leonard, has been invited to perform at the 1991 Mid-West International Band and Orchestra Clinic in Chicago, Dec. 17 through Dec. 21.

Leonard plans to take 65 students on the trip at a cost of $30,000. The school is attempting to raise the money through fund-raisers and donations. Bands, orchestras, jazz ensembles and chamber ensembles from around the world submitted performance applications to attend the prestigious festival.

Gulf conflict from six departments, with the largest number, ten, from the Police Department. Of these reservists, eight served in the Navy, five in the Marines, four in the army, four in the Air Force and one in the National Guard. There were 18 men and four women.

Thirteen, of which three were still on active duty were present for the ceremony of recognition. The others, who remain on active duty out of the area — one as far away as Bangladesh, were represented by family members or department heads. Each received an individual proclamation from the mayor, which began: "When America needed this nation's best to defend the right to Freedom, you did diligently and proudly respond to that call to duty..."

Then the Resort Leadership Council's chairman, Kal Kassir, presented a Desert Shield flag to each of those being honored. The mayor also used the occasion to thank the city manager for having initiated and executed Flag Square at the Municipal Center, and to express appreciation to Tom Barton for providing the funds to make it possible. Other community leaders were recognized for their part in the recent Star Spangled Banner Salute.

But the most moving portion of the program was the special proclamation and recognition of an acknowledged hero, Howard E. Lee, grounds maintenance supervisor, Landscape Services Division, Department of General Services. As a former Marine, he had been presented the Congressional Medal of Honor by president Lyndon Johnson for extraordinary bravery in Vietnam. The mayor proclaimed June 14th "Howard E. Lee Day" in his honor. In Virginia Beach, this was one Flag Day that would long be remembered.

Lynnhaven DAR, Lynn Shores Manor Salute The American Flag

By Ruth Hunter
Special To The Sun

Two hundred and fourteen years ago, our founding fathers proclaimed our country a "new constellation" with this resolution: June 14, 1777: resolved: that the flag of the thirteen United States be thirteen stripes, alternate red and white; that the union be thirteen stars, white in a blue field, representing a new constellation.

Annually, on this same day, the residents of a local nursing home, Virginia Beach, and the Adam Thoroughgood Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, join together for a celebration, honoring the banner that joins us together.

The ceremony opened with the showing of the colors. The flag bearer was Larry Rudledge. James Clark and Steve Santos were the flag escorts. The Star-Spangled Banner was led by Carol Smith and the American's Creed by Renee Belcher.

Cordelia Hames, activity coordinator at the home, welcomed everyone with a poem on the all-embracing grassroots definition of the flag.

William Beasley, president of the home's resident council, participated in the program with an address on the importance of the annual event. Pauline Landrum, Marguerite Tugman and Ruth Hunter also gave short messages at the beginning of the ceremony.

Elsie Brashear, Flag Day chairman, and originator of the event at the manor, addressed those assembled, speaking on the history of the "Grand Union," the "Old Glory" and the "Stars and Stripes." Brashear concluded: "We are the flag, each and everyone of us."

Police Seek Park Burglars

Burglary detectives need the community's assistance in solving multiple burglaries and destruction of property cases at the Ocean Breeze Festival Park in Virginia Beach. Crime Solvers will pay up to $1,000 in cash for information leading to the arrest of those responsible.

On three different occasions, in the early morning hours, thieves broke into storage facilities and offices in search of cash and property. On Dec. 18, 1990, over $3,700 in audio equipment was removed from a storage unit.

On May 13, two officers sustained over $9,000 in damage while thieves rummaged for cash. The latest attempted burglary occurred on May 27 when employees found a rear door window broken but no items were taken.

Over $7,500 in cash and property was stolen during these burglaries and $10,000 in damage was sustained to the office facilities. If anyone has heard any information about these thefts, call Crime Solvers at 427-0000. Callers do not have to give their name or testify in court to collect a cash reward.

Accident On Shore Drive

On July 1 at approximately 11:45 p.m., a single vehicle accident occurred on Atlantic Avenue at Shore Drive.

A 1983 Oldsmobile station wagon, being operated by a 22-year-old male, was northbound on Atlantic Avenue when the driver failed to maintain directional control in a curve to the left. The Oldsmobile exited the right side of the roadway striking the guard rail, utility pole and traffic light control box.

The driver of the Oldsmobile, Sylvester R. Skinner, was transported by rescue to Virginia Beach General Hospital where he is in critical condition.

The investigation in continuing and is being conducted by MPO M.T. Carrey, Fatal Crash Team (FACT), SPOT Bureau.

Law Enforcement

Police Apprehend Robbers

After a joint investigation between Virginia Beach and Norfolk robbery detectives, three suspects have now been apprehended in connection with a rash of robberies at Lynnhaven Mall occurring over an eight-day period in the first week of June.

Horace Euro, 20, of the 5400 block of Sandpiper Lane in Norfolk, was arrested by Virginia Beach officers on June 26, and was charged with five counts of robbery, three counts of use of a firearm during commission of a felony, and one count of forgery. Norfolk warrants have also been obtained for this subject.

Brian K. Jones, 22, of the 700 block of Bayberry Street, in Norfolk was arrested by Norfolk police on June 26, and Virginia Beach warrants have been obtained charging this suspect with five counts of robbery and four counts of firearm use.

Christopher G. Williams, 28, of the 400 block of Beacon Hill Circle, in Norfolk, was arrested July 2, by Virginia Beach detectives, and charged with one count of robbery, one firearm use charge, and one count of aggravated sexual battery.

Suspect #1

Suspect #2

Police Seek Stabbing Suspects

Virginia Beach Crime Solvers if offering up to $1,000 cash reward to anyone who can provide the information needed to make an arrest in the stabbing of an Oceanfront resident.

On Sunday, June 9, shortly after 3 a.m., a resident of Shore Wind condos suffered wounds to his neck and chest area after being stabbed and cut by one of the two assailants he had met earlier.

The two white males police are looking for resemble the composites shown. The first assailant who is responsible for the stabbing is described as 5'10" tall, 20 to 25 years old, with a stocky build, a beer belly, and light brown short hair. He stated he was a construction worker and lived near Laskin Road.

The composite of the second man who is an accessory to the crime is believed to be 18 to 23 years old, 5'9" tall, thin build with wavy sandy brown hair. He wears a diamond earring in his left ear and has a confederate flag tattoo on his left bicep. He called himself "Larry." Both were seen leaving the area in a gray, late model, Ford Ranger pickup with a confederate flag license plate on the front.

Anyone with information about these composites should call Crime Solvers anonymously at 427-0000.

Police Seek Wanted Criminals

Virginia Beach police would like the community's help in locating two men who are wanted for a variety of crimes. Crime Solvers will pay a cash reward of up to $1,000 for information that leads to the arrest of anyone who is wanted.

William Claybourn Howard is wanted for burglaries and grand larcenies in Virginia Beach and abduction in Hampton. Howard is white, 30 years old, 6'1" tall, 165 pounds, has short black hair, and a mustache and goatee. He was last known to reside in the 200 block of Post Canyon Drive in Virginia Beach.

If anyone has information about either of these men or any wanted person, call Crime Solvers at 427-0000. Crime Solvers does not need callers' names, just the location of the wanted person.

Single Vehicle Accident Occurs

On July 3 at approximately 9:50 p.m., a single vehicle accident occurred Diamond Springs Road slightly north of Fairbrook Bend.

A 1985 Ford Mustang two-door was southbound on Diamond Springs Road. The operator failed to maintain directional control and exited the left side of the roadway striking a light pole.

The operator of the Ford, William Bower, 22, of the 5600 block of Tyburn Court, was transported by Air Ambulance Nightingale to Sentara Norfolk General Hospital where he is in critical condition.

The investigation in continuing and is being conducted by officer D. Lazar, Fatal Crash Team (FACT), SPOT Bureau.

Virginia Beach And Phoenix Fire Departments Have Similar Missions

Based on current capabilities and national exposure as one of the leaders in the field of urban search and rescue, the Virginia Beach Fire Department Technical Rescue Team, in conjunction with the Phoenix Fire Department, decided it was time to stop talking and start doing and therefore, initiated an exchange program.

The teams, which are also participants of the National Urban Search and Rescue Initiative, took part in activities at the Norfolk Naval Air Station, John B. Dey Water Tower, and the Virginia Beach Fire Training Center.

Activities included: trench and collapse operations, shipboard and helicopter firefighting operations, and interior, exterior, and structural water tower operations. Training in confined space entry and rescue operations were held onboard the Battleship Wisconsin and the USS Siapen.

As a result of inquiries from several organizations the American Heat/Pulse, a film company that does fire and rescue videos internationally, filmed the entire project in Virginia Beach and Phoenix, three will also be a year-long series on the program.

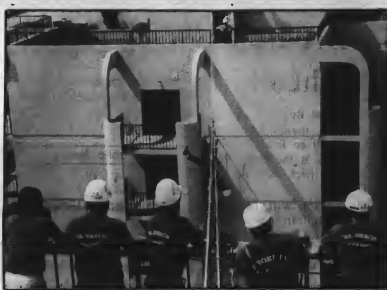

The Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) began developing a process of national urban search and rescue resources that could be deployed on short notice to a major disaster in the United States following a series of natural disasters around the world.

The program is focused on teams and organizations with a significant capability of being trained, equipment standards and funding support such as Virginia Beach and Phoenix who have been asked to participate in the program.

By Sept. 21, the goal is to have 25 task forces organized. They will be selected by geographical distribution and how well existing capabilities fit the requirements. The sponsoring organization has the responsibility of administration, financial and personnel management, recruiting, training, organizing and certifying all members of the task force. Funding is available for only 25 task forces leaving the remaining applicants to be entered into the national data base as potential resources. In the future if funding becomes available these participants may become eligible.

The rescue team is the largest component of the task force, but it is relatively straight forward as far as handling administrative measures. The search, medical and technical teams are, however, more complex. Many of the teams are scattered throughout the state.

Medical teams are required to have large numbers of supplies and equipment. This component may require a sponsor such as a hospital to provide training. The program generates an enormous work load and will require a well designed plan.

The creating of a federal system of trained state-of-the-art equipped resources is commendable. With these resources it will be possible to respond to local and state emergencies.

Pickett Holds Town Meeting

Second District Congressman Owen Pickett will hold a town meeting for the general public on Saturday, July 20 at 10 a.m. in the auditorium of the Virginia Beach Central Library, 4100 Virginia Beach Boulevard.

Pickett said the meeting would be informal and are being held to give interested residents the chance to pose questions or make comments about issues facing congress.

Pickett said staff members from his district offices in Norfolk and Virginia Beach would also be on hand to respond to any inquiries from residents who may want some help dealing with an agency of the federal government.

Recreation

Bluewater Fishing Is Off To A Red Hot Start; Cobia Plentiful

Fishing in the bluewater canyons off the Virginia Beach coast started early this year and has been sizzling for the last two weeks, while inshore waters have featured an abundance of cobia.

Dolphin were plentiful throughout the month of June and were joined during the latter portion of the month by good numbers of both blue and white marlin. Although bluefin tuna were extremely scarce in their midwater haunts, yellowfin tuna were in good supply in waters farther offshore.

Cobia, which appeared last year in numbers not seen in Virginia in more than 25 years, have returned again this year. Coastal waters and the Chesapeake Bay received an influx of cobia in late May and early June, and the numbers have continued to grow in recent days.

Citations totals of the Virginia Saltwater Fishing Tournament vividly portray the early season successes encountered offshore this year.

Through the end of June, anglers had earned 62 dolphin citations compared to an average of only five per year for the same period during the prior ten years. White marlin citations stood at 40, versus an average of only two per year through June during the prior ten years.

Cobia citations show a similar trend with 41 anglers earning awards through June of this year, compared with only 18 last year and an average of 11 per year for the period 1981-1990.

The fast start to the bluewater fishing season holds the promise of even better action soon. Billfish action usually peaks in August and September, while the top dolphin catches commonly are registered in July and August.

Similarly, cobia fishing has been at its best in August and September in recent years, as these fish congregate at the mouth of the Chesapeake Bay and begin their southern migration along the coast.

Barnes Scores Hole-In-One

Hugh Barnes has scored a hole-in-one at Cavalier Golf and Yacht Club and entered the 31st annual Drumbie Rusty Nail Hole-In-One Sweepstakes.

The 179-year old was recently scored at hole #3.

Barnes and C.A. "Butch" Lieber, the golf professional who validated the sweepstakes entry, are both eligible to win the grand prize, a one-week trip for two to Scotland, VIP tour of the Drumbie Liqueur Co. Ltd. and $1,000 cash. Second and third prizes include five personalized, professional golf bags and 100 sets of a dozen Titleist golf balls.

Nearly 10,000 people score a hole-in-one and enter the sweepstakes each year.

Drumbie also announces the support of Golf magazine.

The sweepstakes runs from Jan. 1 to Dec. 31, 1991. All entrants will receive a customized Hole-In-One bag tag from the Drumbie Liqueur Company Ltd. in Edinburgh, Scotland.

Tennis Tourney Benefits SPCA

The ninth annual "Play for the Animals" tennis tournament to benefit the Virginia Beach SPCA will be held at the Virginia Beach Tennis and Country Club on July 26, 27 and 28.

Categories are: mixed doubles, men's and women's doubles 2.5-3.0, 3.5, 4.0, 4.5-5.0, and open.

Entry fee is $40 per team. Each participant will receive an official tennis tournament T-shirt and free refreshments. Awards will be presented to all finalists.

For more information and registration forms call Sugie Harrison at 481-7545.

Should Virginia Beach Residents Seed?

Temperature, Moisture Must Be Considered

Successful establishment of quality turfgrass can be difficult in Virginia Beach.

The extremes in temperature and moisture availability create severe stresses on both cool- and warm-season grasses.

The humidity common in this region promotes increased fungal activity. When this is coupled with the stresses created by the difficult climate, all turfgrass plants have difficulty surviving. Therefore, selecting the appropriate turf and method of establishment requires some forethought.

When utilizing seed, an infinite number of mixture possibilities are available, unlike sod.

Quality seed establishment has several advantages: 1) cheap initial establishment cost, 2) wide variety, selection, 3) low labor requirement, 4) less time for job completion, and

5) ease of establishment in difficult areas.

Soil preparation for establishment is the same whether the homeowner is sodding or seeding; therefore, since seed costs less, the initial establishment cost will be less if an area is seeded.

When utilizing seed, an infinite number of mixture possibilities are available, unlike sod. Seed establishment requires less labor and time than sodding. Because of difficult access in some areas, hydroseeding may be the only reasonable solution.

In hydroseeding, a fertilizer/seed slurry is spread over the area. Some disadvantages of seeding to consider before making a final decision are: 1) an erosion potential during the establishment stage, 2) the time lag before the area will be usable, 3) the need to reseed areas which do not establish well, 4) the need for seedling weed control, 5) limited desirable seeding periods, 6) necessity of frequent watering during germination, and 7) the fact that tangle, end-product quality cannot be purchased.

Extra money for reseeded the areas that do not establish well should be considered from the start. Herbicides may be necessary in the first year after seed establishment and should be included in the computation.

Cool-season grasses are normally only successfully established in our area from September 1 to the middle of October or during February and March. Fall establishment is preferred. This limits the usefulness of seed in some situations. Frequent, light irrigations are necessary with tender seedlings. In seeding, the highest quality seed can be purchased, but remember, there are many factors that can reduce the quality of the end product.

Seed is the most reasonable solution to the establishment problem when: 1) cost of initial establishment is an extremely limiting factor, 2) there is no rush for the finished product, 3) erosion is unlikely, or 4) the area is inaccessible.

If you decide to seed, be sure to purchase quality certified seed. Contact your local extension office for specific information about the types of quality certified seed available in your area.

Rodgers joins 260 other front end supervisors coordinating store operations in more than 1,400 communities from upper Michigan to the Florida Keys.

Rodgers, presently attending Tidewater Community College, joined Rite Aid in October 1979 as a cashier. He was promoted to assistant manager in May 1982 and to front end manager in February 1984.

Rodgers resides in Virginia Beach with his wife, Cherie. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William R. Henry and Mr. and Mrs. Alvin L. Rodgers of Virginia Beach.

Ford Honors Local Employees

Three Virginia Beach employees at Ford Motor Company's Norfolk Assembly Plant, will celebrate milestone anniversaries with the company during July.

William R. Johnston, an employee in the quality control department, will be honored for 35 years of service, and Edward J. Gotta of the final assembly area and Alejandro Peralta in the trim department will be recognized for 25 years' service. During individual ceremonies each will receive a special gift from Plant Manager William Strickland and a message of appreciation from Harold A. Poling, company chairman.

Johnson lives in Chesapeake and Gotta and Peralta live in Virginia Beach.

School

Dr. Laura McMillan, program coordinator of Library Services for the Virginia Beach public schools, accepts videotapes of The Miracle Planet from Amoco Oil Company territory manager Frank Beck. The videotapes and accompanying books will be distributed to various schools through the school division's Office of Media and Technology.

Amoco Donates School Materials

The Amoco Corporation has presented the Virginia Beach public schools with seven sets of the Public Broadcasting System's highly acclaimed videotape series, "The Miracle Planet."

Each set includes 12 copies of the book The Miracle Planet, six videotapes and a teacher's guide.

These materials will be placed in selected school library collections and in the school division's office of Media and Technology's circulating collection.

The college is located in Rosemont, Pa.

city, which he began in 1963 as deputy city treasurer after receiving a B.S. degree in business administration from Virginia Polytechnic Institute, has been "both demanding and enriching. The General Assembly has provided a window for early retirement and that is the reason for the timing of this action."

"The greatest asset available to City Council is the well-motivated, ethical and professional staff of this city. I know the citizens and council will be served with distinction by these employees in the years to come. I am prepared to work with and assist you with the orderly completion of my career here in Virginia Beach."

Obernord said that appointing Watts city manager was a wise decision on the part of Council and that Watts deserved the love, respect and admiration of the community.

Watts has been in the limelight since 1974 when he became director of public utilities serving during a period when the city started its search for a water source. He will be leaving before the Lake Gaston water resource system, which he has nursed along for years, becomes a reality.

Watts was promoted from deputy city treasurer in 1967 to director of personnel, and from there in 1974 to director of public utilities. From there he moved to deputy city manager in 1985 and was appointed city manager in December of 1987 succeeding Thomas H. Muehlenbeck who resigned to return to his home state of Texas.

A graduate of Princess Anne High School, Watts also completed courses in computer science and programming at the College of William and Mary, received a certificate in public administration from the University of Virginia and has completed classes in the MPA program at Old Dominion University.

Watts is a past president of the Princess Anne Lions Club, a past treasurer of the Nimmo United Methodist Church, a member of the Virginia Beach Rotary Club, and a member of numerous professional organizations.

He was selected for 1980 Water Quality Man of the Year Award, received the Fuller Award for distinguished service in the water supply field, appointed by Governor Gerald Baliles and Governor Douglas Wilder to the State Water Commission, and to the State Commission on Juvenile and Prison Overcrowding, awarded the American Legion Award of Merit for Outstanding Community Service, the Fraternal Order of Police Certificate of Appreciation, the Public Technology, Inc., Technology Leadership Award, and the International City Management Association Award.

Recently, Councilman James W. Brazier, who felt that Watts had acted too quickly in ordering an investigation of alleged police brutality at the Beach, asked for his resignation in a closed door session but the request was not supported by other council members. At the time, Watts said that he had no intention to resign.

Employees are eligible for early retirement if they are 50 years or more and have 25 years or more in the Virginia Retirement System by Sept. 1, 1991.

Benefits are calculated under the normal service retirement formula with no reduction for early retirement. Also, five years are added to the retirees total service credit and an additional $100 a month will be payable until the earlier - age 62 or through the end of the month of death. To qualify, employees must apply for retirement by Sept. 1.

The retirees also receive payment at the employee's hourly rate for all accrued annual leave and payment for 120 days of sick leave at the rate of $21 a day and a for all accrued sick leave over 960 hours at the employee's hourly rate provided that the total reimbursement for accrued sick leave does not exceed $10,000.

The retirees also may continue in the city's group health insurance plan and are treated as active employees until age 65 when Medicare is available. Their cost is the same as though they were active employees with the city contributing toward their premiums in the same amounts as for active employees.

The state adopted the plan as a cost-saving measure; the state does not plan to replace many of the retirees. Localities were offered the same option. While the City Council adopted the program, the School Board turned it down.

as reports of draconian cuts in school spending. With state and local governments under enormous and growing fiscal stress, school districts all across America are scrambling to cut budgets. Here are just a few examples:

- Faced with a deficit approaching $13 billion, California Governor Pete Wilson proposes cutting state education spending by $2 billion. In response, school districts have notified over 10,000 education employees they could be laid off next fall.

- Pulaski County, Ark., is talking about going to a four-day school week to reduce costs.

- An elementary principal in Suffern, N.Y., says a projected 62 percent cut in state funding may force his school to increase class size by as much as 50 percent and to eliminate school lunches, programs for gifted students, and some remedial services.

- Last month 21,000 school employees in Washington state were forced out on strike to demonstrate the severe problems caused by continued underfunding of education. At issue are conditions such as overcrowded classrooms, outmoded instructional materials and deteriorating school buildings.

No, money alone will not improve schools and education. But let's not fool ourselves. We cannot reach the six national education goals without investing money.

Schools and children must become top national priorities. Reports from government agencies, private foundations, health and business organizations have detailed the deteriorating condition of America's children. Looking at what America 2000 calls "the other 91 percent" - the portion of time young Americans spend outside of school - these reports call for a major investment in health care, early childhood programs, and other social services.

But precisely the opposite is happening. Social and health services for the poor are being cut in states and communities all across America. Head Start is funded at a level that enables this successful federal program to serve fewer than one in four eligible children. And, in small towns as well as big cities, public libraries are reducing hours, laying off employees, and cancelling book orders.

That's not a prescription for creating communities that value children and are committed to lifelong learning. That's not the way to ensure that all children arrive at school ready to learn.

America's school employees want to be held accountable for their students' achievement in schools that are adequately funded, staffed and equipped with up-to-date instructional materials. But, as America 2000 points out, our young people are in school only nine percent of their first 18 years. And we refuse to be held accountable for the deprivations and missed opportunities for learning in the other 91 percent of students' lives.

So let us set standards for student achievement in school. And let us also set standards for taking care of America's children and preparing them for learning.

Let us hold schools accountable. And let us begin to hold our federal government, our state governments, our local governments, and our families accountable as well. Let us begin to hold America accountable for its future.

in the grand ballroom of the Holiday Inn - Fanny's in Richmond, will select Virginia's representative to the nationally televised Mrs. America pageant. Loudermilk has set her sights on winning that title as well.

"I'm a little nervous. I think if you give it your best and you believe in yourself, you'll do well," she said.

To qualify for the Mrs. Virginia pageant, entrants must be married and a United States citizen. There is no age requirement and contestants do not have to be parents.

Loudermilk said her own child, nine-year-old Joshua, and her husband, David, have given her their full support. On one of the questionnaires sent to her by the pageant committee, Loudermilk had to explain what she liked most about her spouse. She responded by saying she values his strong sense of family. Loudermilk grew up in a close-knit family and has chosen to raise hers the same way.

The Loudermilks are so close, in fact, that all three of them have taken up golf. Because her husband played, Loudermilk said, she didn't want to be left out of the fun, so she and her son are now avid golfers.

Loudermilk said she hopes that by entering the pageant, she will set an example for other married women. She hopes that her wholesome qualities and loyalty will help her to win the coveted crown.

"After 10 years, I'm really comfortable. I feel good about myself and it's time," said Loudermilk. "I wanted to be prepared."

Beach Health Center Provides Care To The City's "Working Poor" - At No Cost

Donations Sought For New Facility And New Supplies

By Karen Dalrymple
Staff Writer

Since it opened its doors in 1986, the Beach Health Center has served more than 6,000 Virginia Beach residents who don't qualify for public health.

Since primary health care is needed, no matter what a person's income is, the center, located on 18th Street and Baltic Avenue, took it upon itself to provide that care - at no cost.

"We realized the city of Virginia Beach had a large population that falls just slightly above poverty level. The working poor is a catch phrase of the '90s," said Mayvelyn Baldwin, the center's president.

The center is open to those Virginia Beach residents who can't afford visits to a private doctor or hospital. The facility, run by volunteers, utilizes the services of about 40 local doctors and 20 specialists, 40 nurses and 30 volunteers who perform screenings.

The center began by providing clinic services one night a week, but has since extended it to three nights a week and Friday mornings. On Tuesdays, Thursdays and Friday mornings, general medicine services are provided; Wednesday is GYN night and general physicals are also available.

Many of the center's patients are referred by the Virginia Beach Health Department, especially if they require immediate medical attention. Many of the doctors who donate their time to the center, see more patients at the center at night than they do during the day at their private practice, Baldwin said.

"We're not in the business to turn people away," she said.

The center previously operated on a walk-in basis, but now patients are encouraged to call ahead first. When a new patient arrives at the center, she is asked to explain her financial situation, her reason for visiting the clinic, and is then placed on a list to be seen by a doctor.

"Anybody could probably come through the door and say 'I need help,' and we'd probably wouldn't turn them away," Baldwin said.

Gloria Stuart was one of those patients. Stuart, a Great Neck Landing resident, was referred to the center by the Health Department about a year ago. She was just going in for a routine pap smear when the center detected high blood pressure. She has been visiting the center regularly for medication and monitoring.

"I don't have any insurance and I have a liver problem and they referred me to a specialist at no cost," said Stuart, who is 60.

Stuart, who works part-time for the American Association of Retired Persons' senior employment office, said she has had extensive blood work done that she otherwise couldn't afford.

"If it didn't exist, I don't know where I would go. They help so many people," she said.

According to Baldwin, there are no narcotics on the center's premises, but some of the doctors do donate some non-narcotic supplies. The center does write prescriptions, which are paid for

Friends Of Juvenile Court Program "Long Overdue"

Board Formed To Enhance Services For Juveniles

By Karen Dalrymple
Staff Writer

In order to enhance the services provided for juveniles going through the court system, the Friends of the Virginia Beach Juvenile Court has been formed.

A 15-member board, which was appointed last February, has pinpointed the need for additional services.

"The purpose of the program is to enhance and aid the probation officers in performing their duties," said Debbie Wilson, a Virginia Beach probation officer.

There are currently 10 juvenile probation officers, and five after-care counselors who deal with children who are sent through the state

For example, the program is in need of about $500 to fund an art class taught by a probation officer. Many of the kids are artistically inclined, Wilson said, and the art court system. There is an average case load of about 20 to 28 youths under the age of 18 on probation at all times, Wilson said. With that many children, there needs to be more outlets for them to keep them out of trouble.

class is way for them to expand those abilities.

"Don't you think that if we took one kid who didn't have to go to prison or through social services, that we've benefited the community?" said the program president,

Jo Ryan. "These programs are worthwhile."

According to Ryan and Wilson, the program is long overdue. The Norfolk juvenile court began a similar program about 10 years ago to provide funding for tuition, camping trips and a big brother/sister program for the kids, to name a few.

"It's needed also for the budget deficit. We're reaching back into the community to help us with the teens," said Wilson.

There are some programs available to juveniles at this time, such as the "Street Law" program. The six-week course teaches teens values, and police officers explain to them what could have happened to

Rogue's To Host Benefit Basketball Tourney; $1,750 In Cash Prizes Offered

Club Rogue's will host a benefit "Basketball Extravaganza" on Saturday, July 27 beginning at 10 a.m.

Nine top prizes will be offered, and proceeds will go to Saint Jude Children's Research Hospital.

The event will be held in the night club's parking lot, located at 616 Virginia Beach Boulevard. There will be a 3-on-3 competition for players 6'2" and over, and another competition for players under 6'2" tall.

Also, a 3-point shooting competition will be held at noon.

Team entry fee for the 3-on-3 is $50, if submitted by 5 p.m. on July 26. An additional $10 late fee will be charged for registration on the day of the tournament.

Check-in time on Saturday, July 27, is 9:30 a.m.

Each team in the 3-on-3 may include one substitute.

Cash prizes for those who compete in the tournament total

In addition to the two principal sponsors, Club Rogue's and Legends Sports Pub, the 3-on-3 competition is co-sponsored by Wareing's Gym; Hoffman Beverage; South Shore Resort Inn; Flipper McCoy's, Southern Amusements; Seabreeze Travel; Tidewater Towing; The Edge; Dominion Printing; Peabody's; and Chicho's. Corporate sponsors and Association Distributors and Perrier Water.

Registration forms may be obtained, and turned back in completed, at Club Rogue's, Kassir Investments (507 Bird-neck Road); Legend's (2129 General Booth Blvd.); or Mary's Kitchen (616 Virginia Beach Blvd.), before 5 p.m. on July 26. After that, participants must register at Club Rogues, beginning at 9 a.m. on the day of the event.

Historic Trolley Tour To Begin In VB

A two-hour trolley tour of Virginia Beach historic homes and sites will begin July 3 and continue through Sept. 1991.

The TRT trolley will leave from the Dome on Pacific Avenue on Wednesdays and Fridays at 9 a.m. The trolley carries up to 25 people and the cost is $4 per person.

The historic tour includes stops at the Lynnhaven House and Upper Wolfsware on Wednesdays, and at the Adam Thoroughgood House and the Francis Land House on Fridays. Also included in the tour are points of interest such as the Life-Saving Museum of Virginia, the Cape Henry Lighthouse, First Landing Cross and more. The tour returns to the Dome at approximately 11 a.m.

Tickets are available at the little round white building in front of the Dome weekdays 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. Advanced reservations for 10 or more can be made by calling Ocean Occasions at 498-0215.

The historic trolley tour is a joint effort of the Virginia Beach Historic Society, the city of Virginia Beach and Ocean Occasions/Beach Events. For more information, call April Carter, promotions director, at the Ocean Occasions office at 498-0215.

Beverly and Wayne Casper, of The Sligo Band, recently entertained the students at Tallwood Elementary, where they both work.

Musical Family Gave Up Stargazing To Make Ends Meet

Caspers Play With Sligo Band For Fun And Extra Cash

By Karen Dalrymple
Staff Writer

Though they're doing something that they love, Wayne and Beverly Casper can't wait for the day when they don't have to work two jobs.

The husband and wife team are both employed by the Virginia Beach school system, he as a custodian and she as a teacher assistant, both at Tallwood Elementary. They also perform together with their country and western group, The Sligo Band.

At one time, the Caspers were aspiring musicians with dreams of making it big, but now they are only interested in making a few extra dollars.

"We may sound like a couple of dull musicians, but we're at the point where if we had a number one record tomorrow, fine, but we're not going to sacrifice everything," said Wayne. "We gave up stargazing a long time ago."

The Caspers, who live in South Mills, N.C., just six miles into the state, are under contract at the Executive Inn on S. Military Highway. They, along with several other band members, spend three to five nights a week in a room provided by the hotel. Wayne usually plays with the band five nights a week and Beverly works three nights a week.

Health Care

Free Care To "Poor"

Virginia Beach residents should be happy to know that there is an alternative to expensive health care. The Beach Health Center, located on 18th Street and Baltic Avenue, provides free care to the "working poor." Many of its patients are employed, but either don't have insurance or their salaries cannot cover basic health care.

Instead of being treated by the Virginia Beach Health Department or by a private physician, these patients can receive quality care from volunteer doctors and nurses. All types of services are provided, from gynecological to treating a common cold. And all are free of charge.

Because the services are available, doesn't mean that they are available to everyone. Each patient is screened and must qualify for the care. But very rarely does the center turn anyone away.

With the cost of health care these days, many indigent people are not able to receive the proper care. Many people don't even attempt to get help because they know they can't afford it. Doctor and hospital bills can put a big strain on the pocketbook. Through the Health Center, their worries about paying the bill can be forgotten.

The many volunteers and doctors and nurses who donate their time to the center should be commemorated. It's not often that something is offered for free, especially something that is so profitable. But, these people truly care about others and understand the importance of good health care. A healthy population is better than no population at all. - K.L.D.

V.B. Politics

Go To The Polls

It is imperative that Virginia Beach residents vote in the next election.

With many potential state legislators coming from the city, voters need to cast their vote for the candidate they think will best represent Virginia Beach.

Voters need to realize that it is their duty, as well as their privilege, to vote. That is what makes America what it is.

More Virginia Beach residents need to get their act together and visit the polls on election day. More Virginia Beach residents need to get their act together and register for that right.

There comes a time in everyone's life when he or she wishes that they had voted for someone else. Many elected officials do not turn out to be the leaders that the voters thought they were, but at least they were elected by the people.

The people are supposed to be the power in America, and voting gives the people power.

Go on out and register to vote. The election is drawing nearer, and the Virginia Beach candidates need your support. - E.K.K.

Summertime

You Asked For It!

Summer is speeding by in Virginia Beach.

The Fourth of July has already been celebrated, and the heat is rising steadily into the high 90s. The humidity level is soaring, and people are beginning to get cranky, due to the hot weather.

If your office air conditioning is broken, look out! There will be shorter tempers and quicker retorts from otherwise pleasant individuals.

It is definitely heating up in Virginia Beach, and the only people who enjoy it are the kids who get to stay by the swimming pools all summer long. Everyone else is forced to suffer through the long, hot, endless days of the summer's sweltering heat.

Just remember folks, in the dead of winter this is what most people are crying for. You asked for it . . . and you definitely got it! - E.K.K.

Letter To The Editor

Officer Thanks Community For Help

Editor:

In continuing its commitment to community services, the Third Police Precinct is currently working a Problem Oriented Policing (POP) project in the Lake Edward Apartments complex.

This program is directed at improving the community by increasing the delivery of city services and by reducing calls for police assistance.

Officers are currently working out of an apartment donated by the Great Atlantic Rental Agency at 721 Lake Edward Drive, apartment 201.

The office serves as an assembly area for the officers, volunteers, and other city workers from the Neighborhood Service Delivery Committee (NSDC) to make contact with the citizens of the Lake Edward community.

Equipment and furnishings were donated by the community, showing their commitment and support. Computer Dynamics Institute (CDI) has donated a used computer and printer to assist with the compiling of information, reports, fliers, etc. Sears from Pembroke Mall has donated a television. Other neighborhood businesses have indicated an interest in assisting with the acquisition of other related office equipment.

The Third Police Precinct would like to thank each business that has assisted in making this office a professional work space and for assisting the Virginia Beach Police Department in making this community a safer place to live.

Commentary

It's All In Your Mind

In the summer, all of the svelte beautiful women get to show off their tanned, toned bodies in swimsuits. The trim, muscular Beach men get to strut around in swimtrunks while adoring female eyes gaze on. And the rest of us get to feel like fat, white beached whales.

"Why didn't I stick to that diet. I should have kept up my health spa membership," we say to ourselves, between gulps of cola and handfuls of cheez crunches. "So, what do looks really matter anyway," we say, gazing at our fat ankles. "Geez, even my fingers are fat," we think. We vow to start a diet Monday and maybe even take up jogging, and we reach for another handful of salad peanuts.

"What's for lunch," we ask our beach buddy, dusting away orange crumbs from our beach towel and watching Mr. Atlas and Miss Beach Beautiful stroll by hand in hand. We think to ourselves how superficial it is to be a "beach body," devoting relentless energy to keeping in shape and looking good. "Isn't it better to have higher pursuits in life?" We say to ourselves silently, trying to rationalize that plump belly and those jelly thighs.

"If I didn't work so hard all week, I'd be tan like him (or her)," we tell ourselves. "I'd have time to exercise, time to eat right," we say, while trying to decide if we want burgers or a sub sandwich and chips for lunch.

"Gosh, I remember the days when I turned heads on the beach," we say to ourselves. "I used to be quite a hot number."

Used to be. Face it. The reality of wearing a swimsuit in public makes many of us confront our own most severe criticisms. We are all our own worst critics, especially when it comes to our appearances. We feel fat, ugly and pale. Our birthmarks, moles, scars and scars show. People can see the beer belly or saddlebag hips we've come to accept as hiding in clothes. The trouble with our self-deprecating mentality is not just that it's self-deprecating - it's also inaccurate.

Most of us think we're fatter and uglier than we are. And we compare ourselves to the two best looking people at the beach or pool. If we really looked around, we'd see that most people look a lot like we do - a little pale, perhaps a little plump or mishapen. Few Arnold Schwarzeneggers or Cindy Crawford models can be found on your average beach.

It's not our bodies that are the trouble. It's our mentalities. This society is too self-critical. The beach and pool are places to enjoy ourselves, not havens to show off our bodies, or so we say to ourselves wisely gazing at the toned body in our sight.

Arts And Entertainment

Wild Fowl Exhibit Opens

Beginning on June 30, Upper Wolfcreek will be the site of an exhibit "deWitt Cottage: Past and Future."

The exhibit features wildfowl carvings and art created by local artists of the Back Bay Wildfowl Guild. Memorabilia of the deWitt Cottage and photos of Virginia Beach's early resort days round out this exciting exhibit which runs through July 27.

The Princess Anne County/Virginia Beach Historical Society has lent its support to the efforts to save and preserve the deWitt Cottage.

The cottage, recently purchased by the city of Virginia Beach and the Virginia Beach Foundation, is the sole surviving example of the type of dwelling which was once abundant in the resort area. It will be restored and become the Atlantic Wildfowl Heritage Center, hub of artistic and educational activities which will focus on wildfowl artifacts and art.

Historic Upper Wolfcreek, 2040 Potters Road, is open Wednesdays and Thursdays, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

For information regarding days and times for group tours, call 491-0127.

Virginia Beach Concerts Expand

Several new concerts have been created in addition to the summer-long boardwalk entertainment series in Virginia Beach.

On July 11, Roger McGuinn, former lead singer for the Byrds, will perform in an outdoor concert adjacent to Ocean Breeze Park. Concert time is 7:30 p.m. with a $2 admission. Bring lawn chairs.

The Guy Lombardo Orchestra will play in a performance/dance at the Virginia Beach Dome on Saturday and Sunday, July 27 and 28. Show time is 7 p.m. with a $2 admission. The concert is part of a two-week Canadian celebration.

For more information, contact April Carter, promotions director, Ocean Occasions/Beach Events at (804)498-0215.

Explore Wild Flowers At Science Museum

The Virginia Marine Science Museum will host visitors in its wild flower garden on Tuesday, July 30 from 7 to 9 p.m.

Participants will learn to identify Virginia's native plants and how to cultivate them in their own back yard.

The fee is $3 for members

The Virginia Marine Science Museum is located at 717 General Booth Boulevard.

For more information call 425-3476.

Paul Cook's Nephew Works On "Texas"

Stephen Meier, nephew of Paul Cook of Victoria Drive, is a hospitality staff member of the musical drama "Texas."

EMS - A Volunteer Tradition

New residents in Virginia Beach may not be aware of one of our city's proudest, and least expensive, traditions. A call to 911 within the city limits will, within minutes generate help - and if the emergency is medical, a team of volunteers will provide prompt, efficient service.

Emergency Medical Services in Virginia Beach have been provided by all-volunteer squads since 1952. In all of Virginia, volunteer rescue squads have been providing emergency medical care for more than 60 years, since the founding of the Roanoke Life Saving and First Aid Crew in 1928. Now, there are 348 licensed volunteer EMS agencies in Virginia, staffed by more than 10,000 volunteers. The pool of people available to volunteer is getting smaller, however, because Virginia has more dual income families than ever before. In general, as we Virginians work harder and play harder, we have less time for volunteer service. As a result, many Virginia cities are now projecting the use of paid emergency medical services at a time when most communities can least afford it.

Virginia Beach, however, boasts a strong, growing pool of volunteers at the ready. Our city is the home of the nation's largest all-volunteer rescue service. Last year, over 23,000 calls for emergency assistance were answered by more than 700 volunteers. This year, our city's 11 volunteer squads will respond to an estimated 24,500 calls Upper Wolfsnare Historic Site and the Princess Anne County/Virginia Beach Historical Society opened its July exhibit with an evening reception recently at Upper Wolfsnare.

On display were artwork and carvings from the Back Bay Wildfowl Guild and memorabilia from Virginia Beach's past and the de Witt Cottage.

The reception and the exhibit are intended as a show of support by the PAC/VBHS for the efforts of the Virginia Beach Foundation to restore the de Witt Cottage as a wildfowl museum. The exhibit will be included on all tours given at Upper Wolfsnare through July 27.

Law Enforcement

Police Kept Highways Safe

During the July 4 holiday weekend, members of the Virginia Beach Police Department's Selective Enforcement Team and members of the Virginia State Police conducted a joint operation in a continuing effort to keep the highways as safe as possible.

This operation involved officers from both departments conducting a motor vehicle checking detail on First Colonial Road and the off-ramp of the Norfolk/Virginia Beach Expressway. The checking detail took place during the late evening to early morning hours of July 3 to July 6. As a result of the joint effort, 31 persons were arrested for driving under the influence of alcohol or drugs, and approximately 425 summonses were issued for other violations of the motor vehicle Code.

In addition, there were two arrests for refusing to take a blood or breath test, seven for revoked or suspended operator's license, three arrests for illegal possession of alcohol, and one arrest for a concealed weapon.

Johnson Shot On July 4

At approximately 10 p.m. on Thursday, July 4, police and rescue units responded to a reported shooting in the 1400 block of Maharis Road.

According to witnesses, a fight broke out at a party and an unidentified Filipino male pulled out a handgun and shot into the crowd.

Brent Johnson, 19, of the 4300 block of Cambria Circle, was hit once in the abdomen. Johnson was taken to Humana Bayside Hospital by ambulance.

The investigation is continuing by members of the department's homicide squad. Anyone with information is asked to call Crime Solvers at 427-0000.

Man Saved From Drowning

At approximately 7:20 p.m. on Monday, July 1 Kevin D. Walton, 13, from Gatesville, N.C., was wading in the Chesapeake Bay near the Lynnhaven Fishing Pier in the 2300 block of Starfish Road when he found himself in water over his head.

It is estimated the victim was under the water from four to six minutes before being pulled from the water. The victim was revived by members of the Ocean Park Rescue Squad and transported to Virginia Beach General Hospital where he was listed in critical condition.

Body Discovered Floating In Lake

On July 3 at 3:30 p.m., the body of Stanley Howard Saunders, Jr., 32, was discovered floating in Lake Edward behind West Hastings Arch. Saunders, who had resided in the 5700 block of West Hastings Arch, had been reported missing Monday, July 1 by friends. He was last seen around 9 p.m. Sunday night, when he went out on the lake on a rubber raft. Police had not been able to locate Saunders after this initial report.

At this time, there is no reason to believe the death is anything other than accidental.

Lee Cahill's City Council Report

Council Asked To Open To Public Chesapeake Bay Preservation Bd. Meetings

A Chesapeake Bay property owner has asked City Council to open to the public meetings of the review committee of the Chesapeake Bay Preservation Area Board.

Peter Pierce told council last week that it would be helpful for property owners to be at the meetings so that they will know what issues they would have to address when the items come before the board.

Pierce also opposed an amendment to the city's Chesapeake Bay ordinance, which defines highly erodible soils. The definition, he said, effectively increases the buffer required between the water and construction under the regulations.

The original definition of "high erodible soils" was taken from the Virginia Beach Soil Survey.

The new definition says such soils are "on slopes seaward of the point at which the slope of the ground changes from less than six percent to greater than six percent and the toe of the slope is located within 100 feet of any component of the Resource Protection Area."

Pierce said that this definition could require a buffer of more than 100 feet, since the measurement is taken from the top of the six percent slope.

Pierce differs with the staff contention that the change does not add land to the designated Chesapeake Bay Preservation areas.

People who find that the site where they want to build is now in the preservation area, Pierce said, will have to go through the hearing process.

Leg-Powered Cabs New To The Boardwalk In Resort Area

The resort boardwalk is getting so it has it all.

Just introduced to the activities, along with the bicyclists (on the bike path), roller skaters and pedestrians, are three pedicabs, which made their appearance at the end of last week.

The leg-powered cabs carry two passengers and rent for $6 for 15 minutes and $10 for a half-hour.

The entrepreneur is Alex

Pierce said that the change will not affect him, but will present a problem for others. Pierce has a two-and-a-half-acre site in Alanton off Linkhorn Bay, which Berkowitz of Beach Pedicabs Inc. City Council last week changed an ordinance to permit the operation of bicycles and three-wheeled pedicabs on the boardwalk unless operated by city employees or employees of the life guard franchise.

About 145 people recently attended the Virginia Beach Clean Community Commission's Community Environmental Service Awards breakfast at the Radisson Hotel. The invited guests were volunteer and community leaders who have demonstrated exceptional service to the community in the environmental area.

Numerous certificates of recognition were presented to those present. Individual presentations were made to 34 recipients in three categories: Community Service Awards, Awards of Merit and Awards of Excellence. The top awards, Award of Excellence, were presented to five individuals and one television station. Each Award of Excellence was prepared by calligraphist Betsy Rivers of the d'Art Center. The awards were fashioned from papyrus sheets made in Cairo, Egypt. Papyrus is a paper made from the stems of the papyrus plant. It was used in antiquity as a writing material.

The Awards of Excellence were matted in black and individually signed by Mayor Meyera Oberdorff. The recipients were WTKR-TV 3; Robert K. Dean; Tim Nichols; Councilperson Nancy K. Parker; Dr. E. Spencer Wise and Maurice B. Jackson.

Maurice Jackson's involvement in environmental issues is long-standing. While working full time for Wheat First Securities, he managed to juggle his time in order to serve as chairman of the Virginia Beach Clean Community Commission; Virginia Beach Beautification Commission; an "Virginia Beach Neptune Festival Sailboat Race; a boardmember of the Virginia Beach Center for the Arts; Virginia Beach Foundation; Sugar Plum Bakery; Life Saving Museum of Virginia and the Bay Colony Civic League; Zone Captain for Clean The Bay Day in 1989, 1990 and 1991, plus the president of the Virginia Beach Council of Civic Organizations. Jackson received a standing ovation when he was presented with his Award of Excellence by Mayor Oberdorff.

Twenty-one awards of merit were presented. The awards were a smaller version of the Award of Excellence presented at the ceremony. The award recipients were: Kenneth R. Allen; Kathy Bryan; Georgette Constant-Davis; Stuart R. Gordon; Fred Hazelwood; Anne Henry; Terre Ittner; Karne Kilday; Beth Lang; Per A. Madsen; Stephan Pahno; Sandy Powell; Chris Solanic; Tim Solanic; Brenda Stahl; Frederick E. Stemple, Jr.; Bartow H. "Pat" Bridges; LTC William Hickok; Charles Traub, III; Cdr. Ted Zychowski; and Richard Whittemore.

Seven business were recipients of the Community Service Award: Designs by Suzy J., Inc.; Gene Walter's Marketplace; Huntsman Chemical Corporation; Lynnhaven Mall; Pembroke Mall; Virginian Pilot-Ledger Star Infoline; and Wheat First Securities. Representatives from each of these business were present to accept their plaque from Mayor Oberdorff.

Center

through a prescription fund. Baldwin said that the screening to apply for care is not in-depth. There is no set income that a patient must possess; each circumstance is different, she said. In Stuart's case, she has no health insurance, therefore, hospitals and private physicians probably wouldn't treat her.

Though the center is doing a good deed by providing free health care to those who are struggling financially, it is struggling just as hard as some of its patients.

When the center first opened, a Virginia Beach resident donated an 800-square-foot house on Baltic Avenue to the cause. The center made a few renovations and the home owner provided them with a facility - rent free.

Now, after five years, the owner wishes to sell the home, but the center can't afford to purchase it. The center has been responsible for hazard insurance on the property as well as city taxes. There are approximately $3,608.09 in accrued taxes due at this time. In order to pay the taxes, the center asked the city for a grant. The grant would permit the few dollars in the center's budget to be applied more directly to medical care. "The city recognizes that we're saving it an awful lot of money," said Baldwin, who added that the center saves the city about $300,000 in services each year. "Virginia Beach is unique in that we don't get much money from the state because our tax base is so low. It's perceived that we're an affluent community."

The center has decided that the house is too small to accommodate its growing number of patients. But, the center also does not have the resources to pay a monthly rent on its own.

"We need to change our location. What makes us unique is that we want to have a space we can occupy and utilize our equipment and volunteers," said Baldwin.

If more people knew about the center, Baldwin said, it may be easier to solicit funds for a new building. The center is currently being supported by Virginia Beach General Hospital, Sentara Health Systems, the medical community, local churches and the United Way. Its current annual budget is $45,500. The center also hopes to provide patient transportation and obtain more equipment in the future.

"We feel we're one of the best kept secrets in Virginia Beach. We need community support," said Baldwin.

But, Baldwin said, many people won't donate to a cause that they think caters to the homeless. Baldwin wants to make it clear that the center's patients are trying to make a living.

"Our population is not a homeless population. We classify them as the working poor," she said. "If they're not healthy, how are they going to function?"

Though the center, which will celebrate its fifth anniversary in October, has never held a major campaign to solicit funds, it hopes that the public will come forward with donations.

"This is a problem that's not going away," said Baldwin. "It needs to be addressed."

The object of this suit is for the said plaintiff to obtain a divorce a vinculo matrimonii from the said defendant, upon the grounds of one year separation. And an affidavit having been made and filed that the defendant's last known post office address is 1840 Colonial Arms Circle, Virginia Beach, Virginia, and that due diligence has been used by on behalf of the plaintiff to ascertain in what county or corporation the defendant is, without effect. It is ordered that Brenda K. Davis do appear on or before the 9th of August, 1991, and do what may be necessary to protect her interest in this suit.

It is further Ordered that a copy of this Order be published once each week for four successive weeks in the Virginia Beach Sun, a newspaper of general circulation in this city.

Through the board has many ideas for the program, no action can be taken without the appropriate funds, said Ryan. Letters have been sent to psychiatric institutions, asking for help, and community involvement is needed, she said.

"The mission of our organization is to provide trained volunteers, alternatives to institutionalization and provide funds for the operating budget," said Ryan, a long-time juvenile court volunteer. Most of the juveniles on probation are age 11 and up, Wilson said, and are placed on probation for any number of reasons, from curfew violation to murder. There is a system in place for juveniles who are chronic offenders, Wilson said, but not for those who just need a little encouragement.

"The majority of the kids we have in the courts are ones who need a little extra push or extra encouragement. They are not classified as chronic offenders," she said.

The length of a probation period is determined on an individual basis, depending on the crime and the child's family and school life.

"We want to make kids aware that there are other things out there in the world that they can become involved in," Wilson said.

Ryan said that she hopes the program will come together by December, but it all depends on the amount of funds that are donated.

"We're hoping it'll benefit the community by creating better citizens and giving parents more avenues than what they presently have," said Wilson. "We have a lot of kids who are first time offenders who need a little direction to get them back on the right track."

for help. And, since the rescue squads serve our community without charge, they save Virginia Beach taxpayers an estimated $7.2 million in equipment and services.

One might ask: what motivates someone to become a rescue volunteer? Well, rescue volunteers share a desire to contribute to the community. They like helping others, and they enjoy being part of a special team with a unique and exciting mission. They have specific needs they want met in their lives, and they find that volunteer rescue work does a better job of meeting those needs than any other activity.

Successful recruiting of volunteers can be one of the most challenging parts of emergency medical services. It requires an understanding of human nature and of the psychological needs which people try to meet through their volunteer work. In September 1990, the volunteer rescue squads of Virginia Beach completed an aggressive recruitment campaign which targeted the spirit of adventure and the spirit of community needed to draw in potential volunteers. Carefully crafted messages for print ads, billboards and counter cards were produced and distributed throughout the city. Commanding the reader to "Play A Part In Real Daytime Drama," the campaign showed how volunteers can "Perform A Meaningful Role In Someone Else's Life."

Production and media expenses were provided by the 11 volunteer squads, Virginia Beach General Hospital, and Group III Communications. The response to the appeal for volunteers was overwhelming. To date, 847 inquiries have been received. From these inquiries, 246 volunteers have joined the rescue system, and 108 others are in training and are likely to apply for membership. At a time when rescue squads across the country are experiencing a decline in volunteerism, Virginia Beach is experiencing a real resurgence of volunteer service.

Community and individual pride have proven to be important factors in the success of Virginia Beach's all-volunteer rescue squads. With emphasis on dynamic and innovative recruitment, our rescue squads will continue to attract people committed to volunteer service, to saving lives, and to saving taxpayers' money. In Virginia Beach, the rescue squads are a volunteer tradition... and, as we all know, in Virginia, traditions are not easily forgotten.

For information about joining your volunteer rescue squad call the Department of Emergency Medical Services at 437-4850.

all levels, shall assure that children are safeguarded from abuse, violence and discrimination.

This Bill of Rights became more than just words on paper for me because when I rode through the streets of Miami I saw, for the first time in my life, people who were truly homeless. They were "living" under overpasses of major highways, in areas marked off with their belongings to define the boundaries of their "homes." Underneath a faded sign which read "Welcome to Greater Miami" people, mostly young, mostly minority, were gathered in groups, talking or playing. For them the idea of the "American Dream" is beyond their grasp and comprehension.

Adequate health care continues to be elusive for increasing numbers of Americans. I watched with great concern the news report of a family who was forced to choose between the wage earner's new job and obtaining adequate health care for his terminally ill young son. Faced with the choice of abandoning the child and forcing the state to take custody or quit his job and depend on public assistance for his family, the father chose to quit his job and join the welfare rolls. That is one of our country's greatest tragedies. Public employees, including educational employees, continue in their fight to gain adequate and economical hospitalization coverage.

Children must come to school ready to learn. That means an adequate shelter, nutritious food, and safety. It must become the mission of all of us to prepare our children today to lead tomorrow.

Tips On Growing Hyacinths In Virginia Beach

Many gardeners prefer to use bone meal as a slow-release source of phosphorus for their bulbs. However, due to the extended processing of bones used to produce bone meal, available phosphorus is significantly reduced and should not be counted on as the only source of phosphorus. Bring a soil sample into your local Extension office to determine if the soil contains nutrients for optimal plant growth.

Avoid the temptation to plant hyacinths in stiff rows and stark geometric patterns. They look best when nestled among shrubbery or ground covers or interplanted in clumps with other bulb flowers. Since hyacinths grow about 10 inches tall, they are especially effective in combination with daffodils and tulips. If hyacinths are used in borders, plant them two or three rows deep, rather than in a single row. Mix and match colors for maximum effect.

Busy poring over bulb catalogs and making decisions for fall planting? Consider putting in hyacinths this year.

Hyacinth bulbs are planted in the fall and require very little maintenance. Hardy perennials, hyacinths will continue to bloom for several years, although the quality of the flowers decreases each year in many areas.

Virginia Beach residents should plant hyacinth bulbs when the soil temperature has fallen to 60 degrees

Since hyacinths grow about 10 inches tall, they are especially effective in combination with daffodils and tulips.

F. This generally occurs from October to early December.

Hyacinths prefer partial shade. Avoid planting them in areas that receive direct midday sun. Good drainage is essential. Break up and loosen the soil to a depth of 10 inches. If the soil is mostly clay, start preparing your site 1 or 2 years ahead of time by mixing in an organic material such as compost (up to 30 percent in volume). Bulbs will survive better in well-

Beach Wins Decision On Lake Gaston

The city of Virginia Beach recently announced that the Fourth Circuit Federal Appeals Court has upheld the validity of the permit issued by the U.S. Corps of Engineers for the Lake Gaston water project.

Litigation over the permit began in 1984.

The Federal District Court in Raleigh ruled against North Carolina's challenge to the permit in Feb. 1990; North Carolina appealed that decision. The appeals court in its July 3 decision upheld the lower court's ruling that the permit is valid.

In its order, the court noted that while there is controversy over the interbasin transfer of water from Lake Gaston to Southeastern Virginia, "there is no longer any controversy concerning either the environmental effects on the Roanoke River, or the need for a new supply of water in Virginia Beach."

City Manager Aubrey V. Watts, Jr. said, "This is an important step in implementing this desperately needed project.

Current conditions in our water system indicate just how much we need this project. The court noted, as we have throughout this litigation process, that North Carolina's allegations of adverse environmental impacts were not substantiated by an evidence."

Mayor Meyera E. Oberndorf noted, "We are very pleased with this decision. The city intends to press forward on all fronts to make this project a reality and to assure the city has a safe, reliable supply of water."

The appeals court decision is the culmination of more than seven years of litigation over the corps permit. This same appeals court is now considering the city's appeal of a lower court's ruling issuing an injunction against construction of the city's project, until approval by the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission is granted for easements necessary to construct the withdrawal facilities in Lake Gaston.

Council Selects Alignment

City Council has selected the alignment of Princess Anne Road in relation to planned improvements of four curve sections south of Sandbridge Road. The selection removes the uncertainty for property owners over which of five alternatives would ultimately be chosen.

The alternative selected (alternate 3) is the least expensive ($2.143 million) and does not impact any homes.

Funding for the project is not available.

The project includes the realignment of Flanagan's Lane;

Transportation System Management improvements at Creeds Park; curve realignment at Munden Point Road, and curve a realignment at Buzzard Neck Road.

City May Nix Flyover Project

The Constitution Drive Flyover, which City Council last July 9 put on hold indefinitely, has a chance of being deleted all together from the city's Master Street and Highway Plan.

City Council recently, by a vote of 10-1, adopted a resolution directing the Planning Commission to reevaluate the need for the flyover and to consider its deletion from the plan.

City Council have approved his subdivision.

Pierce said that the definition, which was adopted by council last week, is not technically correct and should be removed. He said that it penalizes property on higher ground and is not consistent with state regulations. He said that the resource protection area does not have to be that wide.

Assistant City Manager William Macali said that the definition was made as simple as possible, that there is no other way.

Councilwoman Reba McClanan just wanted to know whether the changes would weaken or strengthen the ordinance.

Macali said that the amendments would bring about no change in the water quality.

McClanan said that if the committee has the power to make exemptions, Pierce's remarks had some validity.

Pierce said that if the planning meetings were opened up, problems could be resolved more easily.

Councilman John A. Baum said that he was not sure, that opening up the meetings may make it more difficult for the staff to consider the problems.

Other amendments adopted by council:

- Provide landscape plan preparation relief for single-family residential development or redevelopment.

- Provide plan review relief to applicants proposing expansion to nonconforming structures.

Culture Shock: Foreign Exchange Students Teach Local Families The Ways Of The World

In Return, Students Receive American Education, New Friends

By Karen Dalrymple
Staff Writer

Many Virginia Beach families dream about visiting far away lands, about speaking another language or learning another culture. But, oftentimes, financial woes make it difficult to turn dreams into reality. So, the Academic Year in the U.S.A. program has done the next best thing - they bring the culture to America.

The program, a non-profit, tax exempt, educational organization designated by the United States Information Agency, is a teenager exchange program that places foreign students with local families. So far, the program has only placed four students in Virginia Beach households for the upcoming school year.

"The students come here in order to learn about America and improve their English. What better way than to live with an American family and go to an American high school," said Peggy Sijwerda, the program's regional director.

The students, male and female, range in age from 15 to 18. Most of them hail from Germany, Denmark, France, Holland, Yugoslavia, South America, Mexico, Spain and the United Kingdom.

According to Sijwerda, the placement process begins when the foreign student's parents pay a fee to an overseas representative to bring the student to the United States. The fee covers transportation, health insurance and counseling, she said. Parents can specify what part of the country they want their child to be placed in, as well as the type of family.

Exchange students from Denmark, Japan, Mexico and England are among those who will be hosted by Virginia Beach families.

"We try to please them," Sijwerda said.

Any students may apply, but it takes one with good English skills, good grades and a special personality to enable them to survive away from their family, she said.

Once the student's application arrives to the United States, the program begins looking for appropriate host families. When a family is found, it is interviewed by a counselor and is made aware of the commitment they are about to take on.

"You have to take them places, pick them up after school and stay on top of their chores. It's like having another child," said Sijwerda.

Host families do not have to have children of their own or high school-aged children, as long as the family can provide a stable environment.

"Everybody sort of imagines the typical American family. We get a lot of families that have younger children or who are empty nesters. Their own children have grown and moved out of the house and they have time to give the exchange students a real experience," Sijwerda said.

John and Pauline Crowley are 60-year-old "empty nesters" who have hosted two foreign exchange

Commonwealth Musical Stage Hopes To Preserve Musical Theater As American Art

New Company Also Wishes To Develop Emerging Talent

By Karen Dalrymple
Staff Writer

In an effort to preserve the musical theater as a uniquely American art form, the Commonwealth Musical Stage has been formed.

The company, created by director Jeff Meredith, is also dedicated to developing local emerging talent, providing them with an opportunity to grow and train.

According to Meredith, a Virginia Beach native, there is artistic talent in Tidewater, but it is often overlooked.

"It's amazing how many very talented people are in this area. There are not opportunities available to them," he said. "We hope to enlarge the possibilities for locally based artists."

Meredith, the theater's managing director, brings 30 years of theatrical experience to the project. A performer since the age of 12, Meredith spent many years working in local theater and acting in Broadway and off-Broadway productions. With more than 100 plays and musicals under his belt, Meredith finally decided to take a turn in his career and began directing.

"But, I found out that maintenance was not very interesting. So,

I started directing, which is solely the creative process," he said.

Meredith began directing all across the country, in regional theaters, dinner theaters, etc. He eventually, he landed a position as director of the state theater of Virginia, the Barter Theater.

"It was kind of like a goal to have finally achieved a directorship for that theater," he said.

While at the Barter Theater, Meredith began kicking around the idea of forming a Virginia Beach theater company. He explored the possibilities and found that they were there, but realized he needed a stronger business background.

"I very deliberately set out to prepare myself in that particular area," he said. "I focused directing and acting and forgot all my energy."

Meredith found himself back in New York working for the Metropolitan Opera, of which he eventually became associate director of marketing. Then, he set himself up as a consultant in marketing and fundraising and took on clients such as the American Ballet Theater, the New York City Opera and the Los Angeles Philharmonic.

Eighteen months ago, Meredith moved back to Virginia Beach and put his plan for a local musical theater into motion, compiling a board of directors and doing marketing research.

"While I am committed to the art of musical theater, I take great delight in sharing its entertainment value," said Meredith, who lives in the Shore Drive area. "Every day presents new challenges and new possibilities."

Though the company's board has been formed and its first season is scheduled to open in October, Meredith has not held auditions yet for the productions' casts. Some of the casts, he said, will be comprised of people in "the business" that he has met over the years. He will also hold auditions locally and as far

Great Neck Boxer Seeks To Regain Inspiration Without Longtime Coach, Sport Is 'Tough To Face'

By Kerry Lyndsay Hofheimer

Sean Kropfeld's boxing coach used to say to him, "Strive, Krop, Strive." But the past few months, this welter weight has had trouble doing it.

Kropfeld's coach and mentor for the past five years, Clyde Taylor, died recently, leaving Kropfeld feeling unmotivated and empty inside.

Kropfeld, 22, a salesman and fitness trainer at a Chesapeake health spa, quit boxing. But he's trying to build up the drive to start again.

"When you lose your inspiration, it's tough," said Kropfeld of his former coach, who also coached world champion lightweight boxer Pernell "Sweet Pea" Whitaker. He said since he's stopped boxing, he feels like something is missing.

"I don't feel like me," said this Great Neck resident, who began boxing at age 11 and whose amateur boxing record is 24-0-1.

Boxing to Kropfeld means getting up in the morning and running for 1 to 1½ hours, eating big, healthy meals, working all day long at the spa, lifting weights and then running again in the evening.

Boxing to him means "getting pumped up mentally" and maintaining a positive attitude throughout the day. Boxing means relieving stress and challenging himself, traveling and meeting people.

Boxing means living a clean lifestyle (no cigarettes, steroids or other drugs).

Boxing means having goals and having a reason. And Taylor personified the sport to Kropfeld, called "Krop" by friends and family.

"There's no way I'm giving up

Single Parents And Kids Find Companionship, Comfort In Parents Without Partners

Chapter Plans Family-Oriented, Recreational Activities For Members

By Karen Dalrymple
Staff Writer

Divorce, separation or the death of a spouse can be a difficult adjustment for most adults. But adults with children have it even harder.

Becoming a single parent can not only cause financial worries, but can also make for awkward situations between parent and child. More and more men are gaining custody of their children these days, and some may find it hard to talk to a young female child about approaching womanhood.

Children, on the other hand, may blame themselves for their parents' break up. Parents Without Partners (PWP) not only provides adult support, but it also requires that a balanced program of educational, children, family and recreational activities be provided.

"Most of the people in the organization have been left - either widowed or divorced. A lot of times it leaves you with low self-esteem. It's a comfort to know that there are people going through the same thing, and anger and hurt and bitterness is normal," said Barbara Martin, PWP Virginia Beach chapter's public relations chairman.

The chapter was formed locally about 15 years ago and now boasts 710 members. One of four Tidewater chapters, the Virginia Beach chapter's main purpose is to provide support for single parents and their children and help to build better relationships between them, Martin said.

"We have various topics - self-esteem or fun things like hug therapy, a lot of self-improvement topics," said Martin, who, although her two children are grown, still attends the parentchild functions. PWP holds both educational and social activities five nights a week. Most events are planned about a month in advance, including cultural events, picnics, hay rides, pool parties and social dances for the adults.

One of the chapter's biggest events is its annual fundraiser, Beach Fest Weekend. Formerly known as "Fun in the Sun," the three-day bash to be held at the Dam Neck Officers Club on July 26 and 27, attracts PWP members from all over the country.

"They come from as far as Ohio and Canada. It's so successful that we have people that will be back every year," said Martin.

The event attracts such a crowd, that Mayor Meyera Oberndorf has recognized the event as a Virginia Beach summer attraction, Martin said.

The money raised over the weekend is used to defray the cost of family and youth activities. Participants only pay a $40 fee, which includes a dance, a fun day at the beach, a picnic, games and Sunday brunch. Local members open their homes to out-of-town guests to avoid the cost of hotel rooms.

"They enjoy the opportunity to see people you haven't seen since last year," said Martin. "It's a lot

School Board Seeks $16 Million For Capital Projects

The Virginia Beach School Board at a recent meeting approved a $16 million request for capital projects for 1991-92 as part of a ten-year Capital Improvement program (CIP) for the school division.

The projects include continuation of funding for three schools currently under construction, modernization and renovation projects, site acquisition for new schools, and preliminary funding for three new schools.

How and how much of the projects are funded are up to the City Council. Due to concerns about the city's credit rating, the City Council recently voted to restrict borrowing and avoid a bond referendum in November for school projects discussed by the School Board in May and June.

School administrators briefing the School Board said that in preliminary talks with city staffers, about $9 million of charter bond funding was discussed for use on school projects this year. Another $7 million worth of projects need funding during 1991-92 to address urgent space needs in the school division. In recommending adoption of the CIP, Superintendent Sidney L. Faucette noted that the revised plan addresses goals of the School Board to reduce the number of portable classrooms, reduce class sizes, and stay within the financing parameters of the city. Furthermore, Faucette said, he wants the school division to achieve greater parity of educational facilities throughout the city and to preserve the character of neighborhood schools.

Another $7 million worth of projects need funding during 1991-92 to address urgent space needs in the school division.

Faucette will bring back to the School Board in December a comprehensive plan, to include the CIP for 1992-2002, which will address the school division's long term facility and instructional needs.

Council Has 90 Days To Approve Watershed Plan

By Lee Cahill
City Council Reporter

Unless the city has a protection plan for the southern watersheds in place by Oct. 9, a Pungo property owner will be permitted to expand a housing development in the rural area of the city which conforms neither to the former Comprehensive Land Use Plan or the new plan.

City Council, by a vote of 6-3, conditioned approval for a use permit for five single-family lots in Pungo on a delay in construction on four of the lots until Council adopts a watershed plan or until Oct. 9, whichever comes first. Voting against the permit approval were Mayor Meyera Oberndorf, Councilwoman Reba McClanahan and Councilman James W. Brazier, Jr.

That gave the city 90 days from last Tuesday when the use permit was considered to approve a plan for the southern watersheds.

The watersheds were excluded from the Chesapeake Bay Preservation ordinance because they do not empty into the Chesapeake Bay. However, when the Chesapeake Bay regulations were adopted, Council decided to adopt a protection plan for the watersheds in the southern part of the city. Last October, Council instructed staff to investigate local regulations for water quality protection.

At a work session, Louis E. Cullipier, director, presented the draft report prepared on the watersheds prepared by the Department of Natural Resources and Rural Services.

Council registered disappointment that the report offered no way that protection measures could be adopted before Council's August vacation, that no ordinances were available which could be voted up or down. And Council still has no plan to guide it in making decisions involving the more environmentally fragile areas of the city.

Mayor Meyera Oberndorf pointed out that more applications would be coming in that would fall under a southern watersheds protection plan.

She asked whether the staff had any idea how many applications of this type were in the hopper. City Manager Aubrey V. Watts, Jr. replied that there was no way the staff would know what applications would be filed.

One that fit the bill was before council recently the Frank T. Williams application for a conditional use permit for five single-family homes on the south side of Three Pine Lane south of Nawayne's Creek Road. His attorney, R. Edward Bourdon, Jr., described Williams as the largest farmer operating in the city and one of the largest in the Commonwealth.

The property involved is part of a 45-acre tract off Nawayne's Creek Road which has the subject of various planning applications during 80's. Fifteen single-family lots currently exist on the AG-2 agricultural-zoned portion of the property located between Nawayne's Creek Road and Three Pines Road, a short road paralleling Nawayne's Creek Road and connected to Nawayne's Creek Road through the existing 15-unit development. The property is in the Back Bay watershed and abuts Nawayne's Creek.

The property in the new application is on AG-1 zoned property. Originally single-family home construction was permitted in AG-2 zones (agricultural property extending 600 feet from a road), but a conditional use permit was needed for development in AG-1, the property beyond the 600 feet. Williams requested a rezoning from AG-1 to AG-2 for the 26.3 acres on which he filed the newest application, but that application was denied on April 24, 1989. Williams appealed, but on Jan. 18, 1990, the Circuit Court upheld the City Council's

Chesapeake Bay Wine Classic Set

The First Chesapeake Bay Wine Classic will be hosted Saturday and Sunday, Oct. 19 and 20 in Virginia Beach.

The first day will be an limited-seating auction, with Sunday open to the general public for major wine sample tasting. Tickets for Saturday are $75 per person, with reservations limited to 300. The event will be held at Bayville Farms, a working dairy farm that dates back to the 1600s.

One of Christie's expert wine auctioneers, Ursula Hermacinski of the Beverly Hills office, will preside. Tasting of all wines offered for sale will be available as well as other suitable refreshments.

The Sunday affair will be held at the Virginia Beach Center for the Arts from 2 to 5 p.m. Experts will present a free series of seminars on wine with the price of admission, which also includes hors d'oeuvres. Tickets are $25 per person.

Organizers expect more than 200 different wines will be offered at the classic including selections representing many of the best vineyards, wineries and distributors throughout the country.

Net proceeds are being donated to WHRO and WHRV, the public television and radio stations in Hampton Roads. The fundraiser is being envisioned as an annual event to help public broadcasting in the community.

Advance tickets for either day may be purchased by calling WHRO at 489-9476.

New Collection At Gallery

The Artists at Work Gallery will present a new collection concentrating on local surroundings entitled "The State of Our Art: Impressions by 33 Local Artists," focusing on local talent and familiar places and displays works by many award-winning artists, as well as the works of emerging artists.

Four new artists will present their works in clay, fabric, textiles and batik for the first time. The exhibition opens August 1 at Artists at Work: Gallery and Studios, 2407 Pacific Avenue. The exhibition is free and open to the public.

Artists at Work: Gallery and Studios is a non-profit collaborative effort of local Hampton Roads artists, providing space for working, showing, demonstrating, teaching and selling original art. The two-story building features artists' studios and a gallery on the second floor, and a main gallery on the first.

Artists at Work: Gallery and Studios is designed to be a working marketplace for the visual fine arts where Hampton Roads residents and tourists can observe the creation of original arts and crafts as well as purchase works of art.

Folk Arts Festival Slated

The 17th Annual Virginia Beach Folk Arts Festival will be held on Saturday, August 3 and Sunday, August 4 at Princess Anne Park, at the corner of Princess Anne and Landown Roads, from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

A variety of entertainment is scheduled, including the Old Dominion Cloggers, Madeline MacNeal, the Vrooman Twins and the Highland Scottish Dancers. In addition, magicians, puppets and storytellers will be on hand to entertain children of all ages.

Traditional handicrafts, needlework, jewelry, pottery, baskets, wood and stained glass will be on exhibit and demonstrations will be conducted. Strolling musicians will add a festive air to the occasion. Refreshments will be available.

Admission and parking are free. In case of rain, the festival will be held at the Virginia Beach Community Recreation Center - Kempsville.

Museum Appeals To 45,000 Kids

The goal of the Virginia Marine Science Museum is to increase the public's knowledge of Virginia's marine environment and staff members believe it's important to start with young people.

Each year, more than 45,000 school children are in touch with Virginia's marine environment because of an unusual education program at the museum that uses a combination approach of field trips to the museum and outreach visits. Museum educators reach school children of all ages with programs that range from the "salt marsh" for third-graders to "fishes," a lab activity that brings live specimens into individual schools and classrooms.

The education department offers several choices to teachers who want their students exposed to Virginia's marine environment. They may bring their classes to the museum for a teacher-led tour, combined with instruction in the museum classroom. Last year, 24,000 children participated in this type of instruction.

These special programs are geared to different age groups, beginning with

Each of us and all of us have an obligation to make this planet Earth more secure, more just, and more humane for each succeeding generation.

Children, Education Number One

This week's Sun article is submitted by Lisa Guthrie, a librarian at Fairfield Elementary and VBEA vice-president.

The following are excerpts from the address by Mary Hatwood Furell at the National Education Association convention. She is president of the World Confederation of Organizations of the Teaching Profession (WCOTF) and former president of the NEA.

Heraclitus, the Greek philosopher, said many years ago that, "you cannot stand in the same river twice because fresh waters are forever flowing over you." I believe those words accurately characterize the sea of changes that occurred during the 1980s and which have continued into this decade. We may have witnessed more change in the last decade than was previously seen in any century...

At the same time, we have seen the many contradictions that accompany change. As the world comes closer together and an appreciation for diversity grows, nationalist movements and religious intolerance is also on the rise.

These contradictions exist in the realm of education as well. On one hand, corporations tell governments to improve the level and quality of educational achievement among students. But on the other hand, these same corporations take their products and jobs to countries where labor is uneducated and can be exploited.

Women's Roles And Rights

Last week, a local newspaper carried two columns about the status of women. The Education Department had released a report, "Women at Thirtysomething: Paradoxes of Attainment," citing a gender pay gap. A senate subcommittee is reviewing this study as it begins hearings on women in the work force.

In that same edition, David Broder commented that delegates arriving for the 20th convention of the National Women's Political Caucus acted as if they were in a midlife crisis. Their goal is helping women gain public office. These articles made me think about the altered roles of women in society.

The bicentennial year of the Bill of rights seems an appropriate time to reflect on women's roles and rights. After all, for most of our nation's history, women did not even have the right to vote or to take part in government. Two hundred years ago, their role in society was generally limited to children, church and kitchen.

They report that corporations that were created by men for men are changing, and women are starting new businesses twice as fast as men.

Women's struggle for expanded roles and fundamental rights has been long and slow. American women have received meager credit for the part they played in the progress and achievements of the country. Yet, Professor James Bryce wrote, "No nation seems to owe so much to its women as America - to owe to them so much of what is best in its social institutions and in the beliefs that govern conduct."

Secondary School Absence Policy Altered

More effort will be made to deter secondary students from piling up unexcused absences from Virginia Beach schools as part of a revised school attendance regulation for grades seven to 12 issued by Superintendent Sidney L. Faucett.

Faucett advised the Virginia Beach School Board of the new regulation a recent regular meeting. The former absence policy stated that if students were absent, either excused or unexcused, from school or class more than 30 days in the school year, promotion was denied even if they were making passing grades. If the parents felt there were extenuating reasons for absences over 30 days, they could request a waiver from the principal.

The School Board, school administrators, teachers and parents have wrestled for more than a year with proposed revisions to the policy, noted Faucett.

Faucett said the old policy which resulted in automatic loss of credit for excessive absences did not provide positive incentive for school attendance and sent a punitive message to students and parents.

The new regulation includes school-related activities among reasons for excused absences and students are permitted to make up missed assignments. Parents must continue to provide written notice to the school of the reason for the absence or tardiness.

Students who miss more than 15 minutes of a class period will still be counted as absent from the class.

School administrators may continue to discipline students who take advantage of this rule by arriving late to class.

The new regulation requires a student who misses 12 days of class in a semester to meet with the principal to establish a corrective plan. When appropriate, the parent will be included in the conference and in all instances the parent will be required to acknowledge responsibility for the student's attendance.

If absences continue, the principal may invoke loss of privileges, restricted participation in school activities, referral to alternative learning programs, and/or recommendation for in-school suspension. Loss of credit would be invoked only by the superintendent.

Students who miss more than 15 minutes of a class period will still be counted as absent from class.

The new regulation also calls for each school's Annual School Plan Committee to include among its responsibilities a review of attendance guidelines for the coming year. The committee, which includes teachers, parents, and students, will advise the principal on school concerns and constructive means to improve student attendance.

They've always said that children learn from their parents.

Shirley Barondess certainly took after her mother. As a child, Barondess remembers canvassing the small New Jersey town in which she lived with her mother, collecting for the Red Cross and the American Cancer Society.

Fifty years later, Barondess has kept her mother's tradition alive by volunteering for numerous local causes.

"The apple didn't fall too far from the tree. My parents have always given back to the community," said Barondess, a Point O'View resident. "I got early knowledge about helping others from where my roots are."

Barondess, who was recently awarded by the American Cancer Society for her many years of volunteerism, has spent most of her life doing for others, at the same time holding down a job and raising a family.

Her own large family hails from Vineland, N.J. As a child, Barondess had dreams of becoming a teacher. She remembers attending school at a four-room schoolhouse where she watched the younger children when the teachers were gone. She attempted to fulfill her dream by majoring in early elementary education at Temple University, but never received her degree.

Instead, Barondess found herself being lured into the broadcasting world. A close friend who owned a radio station offered her a job writing copy and she hasn't looked back since. She eventually moved to Miami, Fla., to pursue her career.

It was in Miami that Barondess met her husband, who is also in the broadcasting business. The couple eventually moved to Texas, where Barondess went to work and gave birth to her first child.

The Barondess' moved again and finally ended up in the Tidewater area. In 1966, they moved to Virginia Beach. One year later, despite all the other organizations in which Barondess was involved, she joined the American Cancer Society.

Her first volunteer job with the ACS was sitting with a telephone book, begging for contributions.

"Before I knew it, I was really involved. I put together wine and you, it's going to come get you," she said.

Barondess also held down a full-time job while volunteering. For 17 years, she worked for the Terry Corporation, the company that built Pembroke Mall. While working for it, Barondess was asked to become a member of the first Virginia Beach Neptune Festival board.

"In those days, it was like the Mardi Gras. I was asked to join," said Barondess, who added that the festival now has an entirely different tone and flavor.

Over the years, Barondess has also devoted her time to organizing the Point O'View Elementary School PTA and being a member of the Catholic Charities of Hampton Roads. Barondess is not Catholic, but said she feels it is important to help all people.

"My husband used to say, 'You have an open evening, why don't you put an ad in the classified section looking for a board meeting,'" she said.

Though Barondess believes in staying busy, she felt it was important not to join too many organizations. If there are too many cheese parties, we had movie debuts. I did the public information for many years," said Barondess. "If somebody else said no, I'd say yes, I'd do it."

One of the main reasons Barondess became so dedicated to the cause was because she is a victim of cancer. Her own illness made it easier for her to work with the ACS.

"Cancer doesn't care who you are or what you do, if it wants

150 Jet Skiers Vied For Tourney's $200,000 Purse

More than 150 top jet ski racers recently competed in the 1991 Budweiser Jet Ski Tournament in Virginia Beach. The competition was the fifth stop in a ten-city tour, with a total purse of more than $200,000.

Competitors in the expert and pro levels of the USBA (International Jet Ski Boating Association) participated in three events. The closed course consisted of a multiple lap race with up to 16 persons maneuvering around a twisting course. This event is often described as "motorcross on the water."

The second event, the slalom, is a timed race that is done in a zig-zagging pattern. The third event, the freestyle, is a creative and challenging event where the judges score each rider on a scale of one to ten.

Defending pro champion Christy Carlson has won two straight titles and continues to dominate the women's division. Jeff Jacobs, the men's division unprecedented winner, has won four consecutive times. At the conclusion of the tour, USBA will present national champion titles to eight separate categories.

The Budweiser Jet Ski Tour, a national program sanctioned by USBA, will conclude its tour August 17 and 18 in Daytona Beach, Fla. The daytime 10-city tour will be televised on ESPN.

Another recent Thursday night out at the beach, looking for people having fun. I captured some of these weekday revelers at Jamaican Johnny's and Il Giardino's. Jamaican Johnny's is the new alternative night spot that serves authentic Jamaican cuisine, real Jamaican beer, and has live entertainment on the weekends. Il Giardino's is well established as one of the finest Italian restaurants at the beach. It doesn't have to be a weekend if you want to go out and enjoy yourself, as you can see by these smiling faces in the sun. —Sammy Harrell

Dance For Handicapped Set

A dance for physically and mentally handicapped people will be held Saturday, August 17 from 6:30 to 9:30 p.m. at the Bow Creek Recreation Center, 3427 Clubhouse Road.

The dance will be sponsored by the Fraternal Order of UDT/SEAL, the Virginia Beach Department of Parks and Recreation, and CLASP (Citizens Loving All Special People).

Participation is free. Refreshments will be served and door prizes will be given. The latest hits will be played. Parents and guardians are welcome, however, chaperones are present at all times.

Transportation is available through TRT from areas at $7 per roundtrip per individual. CLASP must know by August 1 if anyone desires transportation.

For further information call Harry Baird on 486-3110.

Sweet Adelines Seek Singers

The award-winning Virginia Coast Chorus of Sweet Adelines International is seeking women singers to learn the style of barbershop singing.

Having placed first in the last competition in the small chorus category, and fourth in the overall contest, it is Virginia Coast's intention to enlarge its group in order to compete at the international level.

A guest night is planned for Monday, August 12 at 7:30 p.m. at Thalia United Methodist Church. Currently, there are openings in each section: tenor, lead, baritone and bass. The musical staff of the Virginia Coast Chorus will assist participants at every level. When the Chorus has achieved a balance, membership in some sections may be closed.

For more information call Alise at 497-8457.

DARs Welcome Citizens

The Francis Land and Borough of Norfolk Chapters of the National Society Daughters of the American Revolution recently sponsored a "Welcome Ceremony" for the naturalization of new U.S. citizens at the Walter E. Hoffman United States Court House in Norfolk.

Chesapeake state Senator Mark L. Earley was the guest speaker. His topic was "The Fundamental Rights, Privileges and Responsibilities of American Citizenship."

School

School Board Elects Officers

Gregory N. Stillman and Dr. M. Boyd Jones were re-elected as chairman and vice chairman, respectively, of the Virginia Beach School Board at the board's recent regular meeting.

Stillman is a partner in the law firm of Hunton and Williams who has served as an at-large member of the School Board since January 1989. He was first elected chairman in July 1990.

Jones, who is a professor-emeritus of Norfolk State University, represents the Bayside Borough. He was first appointed to the School Board in January 1987 and has served as vice chairman since September 1990.

The School Board also re-elected

Dr. Donald Peccia as clerk of the board and elected Sammy Cohen as deputy clerk. Peccia is director of personnel services for the school division and Cohen is director of accounting and payroll.

Regular meeting dates for the School Board will remain at 2 p.m. on the third Tuesday of each month in the School Board Room of the School Administration Building at the Princess Anne Municipal Center. Special meetings will be held at 7 p.m. on the first Tuesday of the month as needed.

Alumni Sought

The Princess Anne High School Alumni Council is looking for nominees for its annual "Distinguished Alumni" awards.

The nominees should be graduates of Princess Anne High School in 1956, 1961, 1966, 1971 or 1976. Selection will be based on outstanding accomplishment in a field and in community service. The "Distinguished Alumni" will be honored at the 1991 Princess Anne Homecoming on Oct. 18.

To obtain a nomination form or to be placed on the mailing list, contact the Princess Anne High School office, 4400 Virginia Beach Boulevard, Va., 23462, (804)473-5000.

Duck Stamps Now Available

The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service has announced the release of the 1991-92 edition of the Federal Duck Stamp.

The Federal Duck Stamp program has become one of the most successful conservation programs ever initiated. To date, over 350 million duck stamp dollars have gone to preserve over four million acres of wetland refuges for North American waterfowl.

The idea for a federal revenue stamp for wildlife conservation in America began with nationally-known cartoonist J.N. "Ding" Darling. Due in large measure to his foresight and dedication, on March 16, 1934, Congress passed the migratory Bird Hunting Stamp Act, requiring every waterfowl hunter over the age of 15 to purchase a stamp annually.

Proceeds from the sale of the Duck Stamps were earmarked to buy and lease waterfowl habitat. Darling himself designed the first stamp, a pencil sketch of two mallards coming in over a marsh pond. Since that time, hunters and collectors have enjoyed a different design each year.

Beginning in 1949, an annual Duck Stamp contest has been held, with a panel of waterfowl and art experts making the selection. Widely noted as the only art competition sponsored by the federal government, the contest has produced work of fine quality, sought by collectors the world over.

This year's edition, selling for $15, may well increase in value, since all stamps not sold are destroyed three years after issue. The stamp is also a good investment in the future of America's wildlife resources. As an added bonus, the stamp can be used as an entrance pass at all units of the National Wildlife Refuge in Sandbridge.

Visitors to Back Bay National Wildlife Refuge are invited to stop by the Visitor Contact Station (VCS) to purchase the new Duck Stamp. All stamp purchasers will also receive a stamp holder and a copy of the brochure, "The Duck Stamp Story."

Additionally, all refuge visitors are encouraged to view the Duck Stamp exhibit currently on display in the VCS. This and other exhibits can be seen on weekdays from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m., and on weekends from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Further information can be obtained by calling 804-721-2412.

Mimosa Webworm Can Be Very Damaging In Virginia Beach

The mimosa webworm has become a serious pest of ornamental mimosa and honey locust trees in Virginia Beach.

Larvae feed on the leaf surfaces causing the foliage to be skeletonized. The lower leaf epidermis is usually entirely destroyed. On the mimosa, leaves will die and turn dull-gray. On the honey locust, the leaves will turn brown, as if fire-scorched.

Leaves and flowers are webbed together as larvae feed and develop. Usually the entire tree is involved with larvae scattered here and there throughout the foliage. Leaflets from different leaves are often webbed together. Repeated attacks seriously weaken trees, occasionally leading to death.

Larvae are grayish to dark-brown, sometimes tinged with rose or pink and are 1-to 1-1/2 inch long. Five white stripes run the length of the body. The larvae are extremely active, wriggle violently, and drop on silk strands when disturbed, much like many leaf-rollers. The adult moth is seldom seen, but has a 1-inch wing span. Wings are gray with a silver sheen and black dots.

The webbing is most conspicuous in August from the second brood. Second generation pupae overwinter in crevices on tree trunks or protected by soil cover or litter. There is considerable overlap of generations.

Since many eggs are laid initially and the young larvae feed extensively, trees should be watched in June for the earliest signs of feeding. Larvae are more difficult to control when larger and webbing is extensive. Adult moths are active over a period of time, so new eggs may be laid after the effects of earlier sprays have dissipated. It is helpful to keep leaves and other debris raked up under host trees.

Saving Seeds From Virginia Beach Gardens

Some home vegetable gardeners may want to save seeds from a variety that is not available commercially. Or they want to perpetuate desirable characteristics in a variety, such as disease-resistance, or they have found the seed that is well adapted to their locality.

It is possible to save the seed of some self-pollinated annuals, such as beans, peas and tomatoes. Saving seeds from cross-pollinated crops is not generally recommended for the novice due to the problems with selection, hand pollination, biennial habits, and genetic variability.

To save lettuce seed, cut the seed stalks when they appear fluffy, just before all seeds are completely dried. Seeds will fall off the stalk and be lost if they are allowed to mature on the plant. Dry the harvested seed stalks, shake the seeds off, and store in a cool, dry place.

To save tomato seeds, pick fruit from the desired plants when it is ripe. Cut open the fruit and squeeze the pulp into a container. Add a little water, then let seeds and pulp ferment two to four days at room temperature. Stir several times.

When the seeds settle, pour off the pulp and spread the seeds thinly to dry thoroughly. Store in a cool, dry place.

Refuge Volunteer Day Set

On Saturday, August 3 at 9 a.m., refuge staff will organize a work day for volunteers at Back Bay National Wildlife Refuge.

All hands will be needed for summer maintenance projects in support of refuge activities. Opportunities will exist for work on trails, landscaping and refuge facilities.

Participants should wear work clothes and bring gloves, insect repellent and a hat. Work will begin at 9 a.m. and last as long as enthusiastic permits. Those planning to stay into the afternoon should bring a lunch.

Project planning will be easier if the approximate number of participants is known in advance, so interested parties should call the refuge for registration, Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m.

The refuge is located in Sandbridge at the south end of Sandpiper Road. The regular entrance fee will be waived for all volunteer participants on this day.

Osprey Program At Refuge

A program on "Ospreys of the Back Bay Area" will be held at Back Bay National Wildlife Refuge on Sunday, July 28 at 9 a.m.

The two-hour program will include an indoor slide presentation, followed by a trip into the field to view nesting ospreys. Participants will be able to see osprey parents tending juveniles at nesting sites.

This program will be held at the Refuge Visitor Contact Station located in Sandbridge at the south end of Sandpiper Road. Spotting scopes will be available, but participants are encouraged to bring high power binoculars and long lens photographic equipment.

Although the program is free, a refuge entrance fee is required, and parking is first-come, first-served. Reservations can be made by calling the refuge at 721-2412, Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Local Optometrist Is Honored

Joe B. Goldberg, O.D., of Virginia Beach, has been honored as the 1991 presenter of the John C. Neill Memorial Lecture at the 1991 Pennsylvania Optometric Congress and Pennsylvania College of Optometry Reunion held in Philadelphia.

Goldberg presented "Aspheric Contact Lenses: State of the Art," which covered the fundamentals and versatility of aspheric contact lenses for non-presbyopia, presbyopia and keratoconus.

The award medal was presented to Goldberg by Thomas L. Lewis, O.D., Ph.D., president of the Pennsylvania College of Optometry.

Goldberg is a 1941 graduate of PCO and a former member of its board of trustees. He is a former visiting clinical instructor at PCO and a member of the visiting staff of The Eye Institute, PCO's clinical arm.

Goldberg is a member of the American Optometric Association and its Contact Lens Section, a fellow of the American Academy of Optometry and a diplomate in the Section on Contact and Contact.

Thomas L. Lewis, O.D., Ph.D., president of the Pennsylvania College of Optometry and a member of the class of 1970, congratulates Joe B. Goldberg, O.D., class of 1941, following the John C. Neill Memorial Lecture at the Pennsylvania Optometric Association Congress and Pennsylvania College of Optometry Alumni Reunion held recently in Philadelphia.

need a good motivator. Just talking to me the right way gets me pumped up," he said.

Taylor, a New York native who moved to Virginia at age 13, said he comes from an athletic family. Kropfled, the son of Bill and Sue Kropfled, has three brothers and he said he always wanted to be a boxer. He met Taylor at age 17 and achieved Golden Gloves status at ages 19 and 20. Taylor gave him his first pair of gloves.

He has maintained his welter weight status (weighing between 147-152) ever since, with little trouble. A typical day's diet is a whole melon, four pieces of toast and orange juice for breakfast, all-you-can-eat Chinese food (two or three hefty platefuls) at a buffet for lunch and an eight ounce steak, vegetables and mashed potatoes for dinner.

He said he's never touched steroids, and he's faster than he is strong. He admires Whitaker, and he said he boxes for fun, not for profit.

Friends sometimes call him "Krop Disaster." "When he gets pumped up, you better watch out," said his friend, Steve Roberts, also a fitness trainer.

When Krop first started working at the spa, Roberts said, he was considered slightly shy. An evening out at a local night club changed all this.

"Before that night I hadn't had a drink for eight or nine months," he said. "I let loose that night."

"He hasn't been the same since," Roberts said.

Krop said he enjoys sales and channels the same type of motivation into selling as he channels into boxing.

"I want to start boxing again and I want to stay in the fitness industry," he said. "Fitness is something I really believe in."

Theater

away from New York and Richmond.

Though there are several fine arts organizations in the area, including the Virginia Beach Pops, the Little Theatre of Virginia Beach and the Virginia Symphony, Meredith said his company is just another option for audiences and artists.

"Our sole mission is the production of musical theater," he said.

Another thrust of the company is to inform the public as to why it exists, ask for its support and provide them with a subscription package.

So far, Meredith has sold more than 500 subscriptions to the company's upcoming season. The first musical, The Boy Friend, will open the season on Oct. 25. This spoof of 1920s musicals is set in a fashionable girls' finishing school on the French Riviera.

The second offering of the season is Funny Girl, based on the life of Ziegfeld star Fanny Brice. Opening night is Feb. 28.

To conclude the season, The Student Prince opens April 17. It is a good example of the romantic genre known as operetta.

Each show will run five performances; Friday, Saturday and Sunday matinees. Subscriptions are currently on sale for $45. All performances will be held at the Pavilion Theater.

"The kind of entertainment that we're presenting is the kind that is accessible to just about anyone," said Meredith.

Once the company gets underway, Meredith said there are several goals that it would like to achieve in the future, including branching out of Virginia Beach, developing a regional tour and programs for schools and senior citizens. Meredith also hopes to develop a resident company and introduce a summer season.

"We're at the beginning. Every great symphony starts with a single note," he said.

Meredith said he has given up acting to take the time to enjoy being a facilitator and create new opportunities for people.

Being the new kid on the block may spark some competition among local arts organizations, but Meredith said it is to be expected. Luckily, theaters are known for their support of one another, he said.

"Ultimately it is the audience that makes the choice. People will choose what they enjoy the most and what they can afford," Meredith said. "You can't ask the public to support you if you don't support one another. The arts are about sharing."

with a lot of love and for a long time. If you take out of the community, you want to put back," she said. "It's been fun. You get out of it what you put into it. You only go around once."

And this time around, Barondess has left her mark. She recently received the division/unit volunteer award from the ACS Virginia Beach unit for her 24 years of dedication and holding diversified positions.

"It makes me feel good because my kids and that and maybe they'll do it. My grandchildren know what their 'bubby' did," she said.

Barondess said she may have become somewhat of a role model for some. People have told her that they want to be like her and often do things just because she did. That makes Barondess feel even better.

"I don't feel that I have to prove myself to myself to anyone anymore. I'd just like to continue to be alive and enjoy my grandchildren," she said.

Barondess also has several hobbies, including gourmet cooking, collecting memorabilia, traveling and being a "pack rat" - she doesn't throw anything away, she said. She is as committed to her hobbies as she was to her career, her family and her volunteerism.

"I used to wake up the children every morning and say, 'Good morning, it's a brand new day, one you've never seen before.' I guess I'm a very positive person," Barondess said. "I like to keep thinking things will get better no matter what they are. I don't like to give up."

Students

students in their Larkspur home. The couple was made aware of the program through an ad in their church newsletter.

"I said to my husband, 'Why don't we see about having a student in our home,'" said Pauline.

Their first visiting student, a German boy, spent the 1988-89 school year with them. For 10 months, the Crowleys provided him with food and room and board, while he attended a local high school. In return, the boy taught the couple about his country and became their life-long friend.

The next year, the Crowleys hosted a girl from Denmark. Just recently, they visited both of their "new friends" in their home countries in Europe.

"We enjoyed their company. They were outgoing and interesting. It was like a child of our own was in our home," said Pauline, whose own three children are grown.

Before a student arrives, the host families are given an orientation which prepares them for the visit. When the student arrives, he is assigned a counselor and enrolled in a nearby school, space permitting.

According to Dorothy Barber, director of the Virginia Beach public schools' office of community relations, a school board regulation states that no more than five J1 foreign exchange students can be enrolled at any particular high school at a time. J1 specifies that the student is visiting for the sole purpose of cultural enrichment. Also, no more than two J1 students from the same country can enroll in the same school. There are currently 36 students enrolled for the upcoming school year, Barber said, and four students have been placed on a waiting list.

"We start getting student applications as early as December for the next year," said Sijwerda. Sijwerda has several students who are awaiting a host family. All are boys, however, because girls seem to be placed more quickly. One English boy, David Ashworth, specifically requested that he be placed in Virginia. The 18-year-old history buff feels that the state's history would fascinate him.

Makoto Watanabe, a 17-year-old Japanese boy who enjoys swimming, judo and karate, requested a family with no pets. "Girls are scarce, but it is possible to locate one. More boys enter the program, so we've got more boys," said Sijwerda.

The Tom Weil family, of College Park, was lucky enough to host both a boy and a girl, both from Denmark.

The Weils answered an ad in the newspaper seeking host families for the summer of 1987. They had two students stay with them for two consecutive summers.

"We had a good experience over the summer, so we said let's try it," said Tom Weil.

In 1989, Ken Anderson came to live with the Weils for the year. During his stay, Ken's parents made a visit to the states, bringing along Danish friend Annetta Koch. Weil said he was so impressed with Koch that he asked her to be their exchange student the next summer.

"We've become overseas friends," he said. "We had a great time. It's a good experience."

Weil said that the exchange students became like his own children - he had to worry about them just as he did about his own two kids, he said. He taught them both how to drive, at the same time learning their language and culture.

In a questionnaire that the students are asked to fill out once their visit is over, Annetta Koch said that because many American students learned so much about her country, her visit was also a good experience for them.

Rogelio Sepulveda, a Mexican student who attended Princess Anne High School, said, "The exchange program is fun, interesting and it's the best way to know other cultures and lifestyles."

Sijwerda said that most of the students come to the United States speaking little English, especially the Japanese. One of the main reasons they visit is to improve their English skills, she said.

Sijwerda said that the foreign students are mostly fascinated by America's language, customs, inexpensive clothing and food. What some students sometimes find hard to adapt to, however, is the lack of freedom that American teenagers have. European teenagers are raised to be more independent, Sijwerda said.

"Americans are more conservative with their teenagers. We try to avoid problems by paying close attention to the matching process," she said. "They see America like it is in the movies and when they come here they see that it's not."

On the one hand, the International Monetary Fund and the World Bank assist countries that are having difficulty improving their economic stability and standard of living. On the other hand, the IMF and the World Bank implement policies that require these same governments to reduce school funding and decrease training and certification requirements for teachers - policies that undermine a nation's efforts to overcome economic stagnation.

We know that change is inevitable and that we, the educators and education employees of the world, must be in the forefront of that change.

We believe that neither nations nor individuals can ever be free until and unless each man, woman and child is educated and free.

Today, we hear talk of a new world order. But what we need to say, however, about any new order is children and education must be the number one priority. Any world order that does not recognize that priority is an order doomed to chaos.

We can no longer afford such folly. We cannot afford to have one-quarter of the world's people illiterate. A nation that does not invest in the education of its people cannot and will not survive in this technological age.

The platitudes and homilies of the past have no place in the future. The children of the world do not need homilies. They need education.

Nor do the teachers and education employees of the world need platitudes. We need support. We need trust. We need to be treated as professionals and allowed to do our jobs.

We, the educators, the educational employees of the world, have a moral and a professional responsibility. We have an obligation to stand up and defend the professional, human and civil rights of our members.

We need to unite. We need to mobilize for action. We need to understand that the events occurring throughout the world bond teachers and education employees together as never before. These national and global changes, however, demand that we become even more effective and more united in the struggle to guarantee equal education opportunities and social justice for all.

Education employees - together the world over - are the principle frontline of defense for education, the profession, and the future of the world's children.

We will continue to accept the challenge to provide the most basic civil rights of all - the right of every individual to receive an education.

But for that right to be enjoyed, we must liberate our leaders and help them to understand that people want leaders who have the guts and political will to stand up and fight for the future of our children.

They need to understand and support the ideals reflected in the convention on the rights of the child - ideals stating that every child should have the right to a name, a nationality, a home, basic nutrition, and an education.

These are very basic, very humane ideals that our leaders, our governments and we can support to demonstrate to the children of the world that we care about them - we care about their future.

They are rights that every child, whether growing up in Appalachia or the inner city of Miami - whether living in Nairobi, Budapest, Tokyo or San Juan - should have.

These are rights that give one hope where there is no hope. These are the small things that must be given to the children of the world. They can wait no longer.

Gabriella Mistral, the 1945 winner of the Nobel prize for literature, put it best when she said:

"Many things in life can wait. But the child cannot. Now is the time when his bones are being formed, his blood is being made, and his mind is being shaped. His name is not tomorrow. It is today."

Each of us and all of us have an obligation to make this planet Earth and more secure, more just, and more humane for each succeeding generation. It is now our turn, our responsibility, our legacy to this planet - to make it a home for our children and their future.

of dancing, laughing and having a good time."

Phyllis Dailey, a Salem Village resident and PWP member, opened her home to 11 fellow members last year during Beach Fest weekend. This year, she is on the event's decorations committee.

"We had an absolute ball," she said. "It was like one big family."

Adults, as well as children, form strong bonds with other PWP members and their children, Martin said. Beach Fest gives them a chance to share their likes and dislikes with people with whom they have a lot in common. James Mahler, father of a 10 and 13-year-old, joined PWP specifically so his children could meet new people and visit new places.

"Now, I really enjoy going to the dances on Saturday nights," said Mahler, a Hilltop resident who plans to volunteer his services for Beach Fest.

According to Martin, raising children alone takes some getting used to.

"My kids were teenagers when I was separated. It is difficult. The parents feel guilty because the child doesn't have both a mother and a father," she said.

Dailey, the mother of two grown boys, had been involved with a West Virginia PWP chapter when she moved to Virginia Beach. Dailey, who has been widowed and divorced, said that the organization helped her children deal with the loss, and looked forward to PWP activities.

"To me, it's a good way to make friends. We all have something in common," she said.

"There's a lot of camaraderie. We share our feelings and talk about things that bother us."

Martin said that there have been instances where PWP members met and married, though she stressed that the organization is not a dating service. Several of the married members are looking into forming a branch group of PWP for themselves. Martin added that it is not unusual to find a husband and wife who are separated or divorced and in the same PWP chapter.

"It took me a long time to realize that I needed to do something," she said. "I didn't know where to go to meet people. It was the best thing that ever happened to me."

the museum. Last year, more than 10,000 students visited the museum for teacher-led tours.

In addition, schools may request a visit from the Chesapeake Bay Marine Learning Lab. The museum educator in charge of this mobile unit is on the road every day of the week, visiting schools in the state within a 100-mile radius of the museum.

The learning lab offers five programs, such as sharks, fishes and oceanography, which are designed to take the Chesapeake Bay into classrooms and auditoriums. Live animals in aquariums, preserved specimens, models and films, make the bay come alive. Last year, more than 12,000 school children received a visit by the traveling teacher and over 500 teachers received in-service workshops.

Whether teachers sign up for museum programs, teacher-led tours, or the learning lab, they receive "Waterworld," a newsletter full of tips and information to make a visit with the Museum a rewarding and interesting experience.

As you can see, the Virginia Marine Science Museum has developed a comprehensive education program which will educate our youth about Virginia's marine environment from pre-school through high school.

Virginia Beach Police Department Report to the Community

Police Chief Increases Public's Understanding Of Brutality

By Charles R. Wall
Chief Of Police

Ever since the highly publicized arrest of Rodney King by Los Angeles police officers, citizens across America have closely examined their local police departments, with a critical look at the use of physical force.

In this report to the community, I would like to let the citizens and visitors in this community know about the efforts of the Virginia Beach Police Department to ensure that only necessary force is utilized in the performance of our duties.

In order to talk about our duties, I must first describe the basic police mission. The police function is much more than just catching criminals. We must protect constitutional rights, provide service with sensitivity, and demonstrate our belief in the value of all peoples. This department strives to prevent criminal activity and to provide an environment that will improve the quality of your life.

Our approach to implementing these goals is to offer a community service model of policing, with an emphasis on input from the community. Citizens are beginning to take a critical look at how they are policed, and have indicated an interest in taking an active role in public safety.

I have noticed that here in Virginia Beach, we have a sophisticated, intelligent population that recognizes that police are not defined by physical strength alone. There is a public expectation that this department demonstrate professionalism and awareness of the rights of all humans, as well as maintaining a low crime rate. We intend to fulfill that expectation.

With these values as a foundation, why are you suddenly beginning to hear about allegations of brutality in Virginia Beach? Statistics and studies suggest that society is becoming more violent. Many police television shows sensationally depict both criminal violence and police brutality as common practices. While Virginia Beach continues to enjoy a low crime rate, both residents and police are affected by this media portrayal. Citizens want to know that they are personally safe from acts of violence, but not at the risk of oppressive police tactics.

In response to your concern about the actions of Virginia Beach officers, I have taken a step to share some of the inner workings of this department with you. Traditionally, because of rights of individual officers, state laws, officer morale, and the need to protect some strategies from criminal awareness, police departments have remained silent on these kinds of issues. I believe, however, that the community has a need to increase its understanding of the brutality issue, as well as a responsibility to communicate with police about the community values you cherish.

Therefore, you will begin to see more information about complaints of excessive force and our response to them. It is not the case that we are suddenly taking action about these complaints; we have always actively worked to correct police misconduct. This is simply a change in what is publicly released. I am still limited in providing certain details, as many situations involve civil concerns and pending litigation, but I want you to receive at least enough information to assure you that we do not tolerate excessive use of force and that we continually review our procedures to ensure that our officers are given all the tools they need to perform their job with the utmost respect for human dignity.

One important tool we have is our use of force policy. This is issued to each officer on the date of employment. He/she is responsible for thoroughly understanding this policy, which will be reviewed in detail throughout 20 weeks of academy training, firearms qualification, riding with a field training officer, the probation period and frequent in-service instruction. This policy emphasizes the use of progressive force, dependent on the level of threat to an officer or other person.

Police officers have the discretion to choose from mere presence, verbal command, light hands-on, heavy hands-on, intermediate force (mace), the Nova stun gun, the baton and lastly, deadly force; the firearm. The use of these alternatives is a stair-step progression that an officer takes in response to the force directed at him, her or another person. If at any time the suspect escalates his force, the officer may do the same. Similarly, if the suspect de-escalates his threat, the officer must de-escalate the force he uses.

Secondly, officers receive extension training in cultural awareness to ensure that diversity is valued and understood. It is important for officers to be able to appreciate the unique communications techniques of all cultures. This department has requested assistance from such agencies as the Chicago Police Department, Howard University, the ACLU and the NAACP to improve this ongoing training. Additionally, recruits and in-service officers receive training in the study of works as a force option, and human relations skills.

Management too, must have the tools to perform their function. Supervisors receive training in recognizing officer stress, accountability and options for correction. This department also utilizes an in-depth screening process in the hiring of police officers. The process begins with a written examination, followed by testing of physical ability. The applicant then receives a polygraph, a background investigation and an oral board interview.

Lastly, a complete physical and psychological examination is administered. The psychological testing includes a battery of tests and interviews that attempt to measure emo-

Heat Takes its Toll On Virginia Beach, But This Heatwave Is Not The Worst

Temperatures Expected

Charles Brinson drinks about a gallon of water a day. He has to; if he didn't he'd probably pass out on the job.

Brinson is a mail carrier who spends four to five hours a day, under the sun's beaming rays, delivering mail to residents in the Lynnhaven area. With temperatures skyrocketing past the 100-degree mark recently, you can bet that Brinson has learned to pace himself. "I've never experienced heat like that before. That's the hottest it's ever been," said Brinson about last week's 115-degree temperatures. "You just learn to deal with it. You don't really get used to it."

Brinson is one of the lucky ones who didn't fall prey to the heat's dangers. Bill Kiley, Emergency Medical Services' public affairs officer, said that Virginia Beach's rescue squads responded to 23 heat-related emergencies from July 10 through 24. That's a lot, he said, considering that there were only 14 cases for the entire month of July last year.

"The heat has definitely taken a toll on everybody this summer. We've been very busy," he said.

The extremely high temperatures that Virginia Beach has been experiencing can be life-threatening to us all, but particularly to senior citizens and small children, Kiley said, because they are unable to protect themselves and their bodies are unable to adjust to the heat.

Most of the calls that the rescue squads have responded to involved heat exhaustion, heat cramps or heat stroke. Those suffering from heat exhaustion are unable to control the water and salt levels in their body, therefore they become lethargic, sweaty, dizzy and experience headaches.

High temperatures can also cause muscle cramps, which occur when the body is unable to metabolize. A heat stroke, the most serious of the illnesses, occurs when a body can no longer sweat.

"This can happen quickly. It's a dangerous emergency," said Kiley.

Luckily, the United States Postal Service gives safety talks to all of its mail carriers before they head out into the heat. Brinson was told if he began to feel clammy, nau-

Foreign Au Pairs Provide Beach Families With Child Care And Old World Charm

Au Pairs Care For Children And Learn
American Culture

By Karen Dalrymple
Staff Writer

Working parents can attest to the fact that day care is costs are becoming phenomenal. Especially if more than one child is involved.

For about $170 a month, families can avoid dropping off and picking up their children at a day care center. The AuPairCare program can provide them with an in-home care-giver, complete with accent and Old World charm.

Au pair care is a concept that has existed in Europe for many years. Families in one country want their daughter to learn about another country and send them to a family to help with their children. "The families looked at it as a good educational opportunity to go to another country and learn," said Peggy Sijwerda, an AuPairCare community counselor.

The program, overseen by the government, allows a male or female trying to make American friends, Revell said she has adjusted well to her hosts and feels like a part of the family.

"I've always wanted to come to America. I worked with children in England and I thought this was an ideal opportunity," she said.

Revell is responsible for the care of a five-year-old and a one-year-old boy. Her day begins at about 6 a.m., though she said there is no set routine.

"We go to the park and go shopping. I play with the kids and get their breakfast and lunch," Revell said.

The au pair is not to be confused with a nanny, however. Nannies, who usually hail from England, are typically older women who don't interact with the family. Though nannies are live-in, they usually spend most of their off-duty time in their rooms, Sijwerda said.

Sijwerda also stressed that an au

ECSC Weekend: A Late Summer Best Bet

Looking for one last summer getaway? For the last weekend in August, this mid-Atlantic resort is definitely the place to be for sun, sand, surf and sports.

boarding, windsurfing, skateboarding and live entertainment are all part of the 29th Annual East Coast Surfing Championships (ECSC), the weekend of August 23-25.

ECSC is the second oldest continuously-run surfing contest in the world and is produced by the Virginia Beach Jaycees. From its start in the summer of 1963 as a local get-together for the Jaycees and some of their surfing friends, ECSC has become a major summer sports and beach festival that annually draws thousands.

Over 100 professional surfers from all over the world are expected to compete for $15,000 total cash purse. More than just another stop on the circuit, ECSC is a surfing tradition and the crown jewel of the seven-stop ASP-East professional tour.

An estimated 350 amateur surfers and bodyboarders are also expected to compete for non-cash prizes and top ESA amateur rankings. The Pro/Am windsurfing competitions will also be sanctioned for national rankings.

The sight of skateboarders performing their aerial acrobatics on wooden half-tube ramps on the sand is unique to the ECSC.

Local and regional windsurfers, skimboarders and volleyball players will participate in competitions throughout the weekend, on the beach from Rudee Inlet to 8th Street at the Virginia Beach Oceanfront.

But ECSC offers something for everyone. In addition to sporting events, other activities include six bands performing live over three days on the 1st Street Beach Stage beginning with a Friday evening kick-off beach party and including a national recording group headlining Saturday's entertainment at dusk; a five-kilometer run on Saturday; food and beverage concessions; a screening of a surfing feature film, an arts show, a team tug-of-war competition and the famous ECSC men's and women's swimsuit contests.

Missing Children

There's Help Available

Thousands of children of all ages are reported missing every year. Most of them are runaways.

Obviously we all know how hard it is to be a teenager, especially in this day and age. Kids go through changes and often-times the parents don't see those changes or choose to ignore them. Kids also are faced with peer pressure - pressure to do drugs or drink alcohol or skip school - you name it. When a child gives in, it often leads him or her to trouble.

Apparently, some children cannot deal with the fact that they are teenagers - not adults - and can't handle curfews, being told what to do and who to hang out with. They don't understand that their parents put these restrictions on them for their own good and safety. So, instead of communicating with their family about their problems, some teens opt to run away from them. Many run to a friend's house and return soon after, but some run far away, alone, with no money and no one to turn to. These are the children who sometimes never return home, and not because they don't want to.

Runaways who think they are old enough, mature enough and tough enough to live on their own, on the streets with other runaways and homeless people, are dead wrong. They don't realize how good they had it at home until they are gone. Runaways often become involved in drugs, prostitution, theft - anything to make some money to survive. And, though they may make friends with other runaways and people their own age, these kids can also run into the wrong person. There are people out there who hunt for young, ignorant, desperate children. These are the kids who end up dead or in porno flicks.

Sometimes kids runaway because they are sexually molested or physically or mentally abused. Who would blame them for wanting to run away? But, what these kids need to be told is that there is help out there for them. Before they pack their bags and slip out of the house in the middle of the night without a penny in their pockets, they should be aware of the many hotlines, shelters and support groups who cater to abused children. Make a phone call before you make any hasty decisions.

Kids who leave home just because they think it's the cool thing to do should also be aware of a hotline number, 1-800-621-4000, that they can call for advice or help.

Once these kids are returned home, they will probably realize that there's no place like home compared to the mean and lonely streets. If anyone you know has run away, and you know where they are hiding, let his or her parents know. You could be saving your friend's life. - K.L.D.

Commentary

Surviving The Sweaty, Sweltering Days Of A Virginia Beach Summer

Will these long, sweltering days of summer ever end? Not likely - it's not even August yet.

Many Virginia Beach residents are probably counting the days until the first flakes of snow fall. It's a shame; summer is supposed to be a season to enjoy. But how can one enjoy themselves when their clothes are drenched and sticking to their body?

For the past few weeks, the temperatures have zoomed into the 100's. Combined with the humidity, it has been as hot as 115 degrees. Who in their right mind would venture out for a day at Busch Gardens or for a game of miniature golf? Nobody. The only recreational activities that I have engaged in were related to water (the beach or a pool) or watching television in the coolness of my condo.

Yes, I am one of those people who hates to sweat, so sitting on the couch in a 70-degree room is definitely more appealing than seeing my makeup drip off of my face while taking a leisurely bike ride on a 90-degree day. It kind of bothers me that it is so hot because I am one who likes to spend her entire weekend covered in suntan oil in my beach chair. Even at the beach, with the water just feet away, the heat is still unbearable.

"Yes, I am one of those people who hates to sweat, so sitting on the couch in a 70-degree room is definitely more appealing than seeing my makeup drip off of my face while taking a leisurely bike ride."

Recently, the air conditioner in my car was on the blink. On these extremely hot days, it insisted on blowing out hot air. So, by the time I got to work, I was miserable. The rides home were even more enjoyable, especially when I hit traffic and was at a dead stop - no breeze whatsoever. So, during the week of my vacation, I took the car in and resupplied it with frozen. Only the front won't last long; there's a crack in my air conditioning unit. Just what I need.

I couldn't imagine having a job that required me to work outside all day. Construction workers, mail carriers, highway workers, Lappard you. Not only is extreme heat dangerous, but it is just plain old uncomfortable. It amazes me how one can make it through a day with their hair sopping wet and with sweat dripping in their eyes. No thanks, I'd rather freeze to death.

I guess being hot doesn't bother some people. Apparently kids could care less if they sweat all day. They can play outside for hours in dead heat and not even miss the cool hum of the air conditioner.

Hopefully, this heatwave will pass over us and we can get back to enjoying our summers. With a little offshore breeze, a hot day can be turned into an awesome day. So, air conditioning addicts like myself, don't despair; we'll be able to go outside soon without being miserable. We may be pale, out of shape and addicted to MTV, but at least we won't be hot.

Police Seek Station Robbers

Crime Solvers would like the community's help in identifying three people responsible for a theft from a gas station. If anyone provides information that helps identify the men, they will receive a cash reward of up to $1,000.

On Tuesday, May 21, about 4 a.m., three men in an older model, two-door car with a white top pulled into the lot of the Texaco station in the 6000 block of Indian River Road at the intersection of Reon Drive. Two of the men entered the station, took a map, cigarettes and money from the cash register as the attendant slept.

All three men were white and appeared to be in their late teens or early twenties. One man was wearing a dark, long sleeve T-shirt with a large skull on the front and a dark colored baseball cap worn backwards. The other man had dark, bushy, wavy hair to his shoulders and a medium build. The third man, who appeared to be the driver, had straight dark hair to his shoulders and a thin build.

If anyone has information about these men or any other crimes, call Crime Solvers at 427-0000. Callers will not have to give their name or testify in court to collect a cash reward.

Police Conclude Brutality Investigation

The Virginia Beach Police Department has concluded its internal investigation into the complaint filed by Victoria Craddock and her son Michael Baldwin.

The investigation began when these two individuals made allegations of excessive force and improper detention against police who arrested them in April after a scuffle with a bouncer at an Oceanfront bar.

All charges associated with this situation were instituted on the night of the incident. The department's probe encompassed 28 interviews, and was expanded to review the participation of five department members.

After evaluation of each of the complaints, as well as some procedural questions raised by investigators and the department's disciplinary review board, two officers have received reprimands for failing to follow proper procedure in the detention of Craddock.

In connection with that detention, one supervisor who was in a position to correct the situation, will be suspended. It was the determination of the command and all reviewers that the force used during the arrests of Baldwin and Craddock was proper.

Jet Ski Thieves Sought

Virginia Beach detectives are investigating two thefts of jet skis that are valued at over $23,000. If anyone provides information that leads to an arrest or the recovery of the jet skis, they will receive a cash reward of up to $1,000.

On Monday, June 17, sometime during the night, thieves stole three Kawasaki jet skis, a Shorelander trailer, and three life jackets from the back yard of a home in the 900 block of Baja Court in Lago Mar. Almost a month later, on Wednesday night, July 10, an Ex-loader trailer with two Yamaha Wave Runners were removed from the front yard of a home in the 4800 block of Graystone Court in Bellamy Manor Estates.

If anyone has information about these or any other stolen property, wanted people, drugs or any other crime, call Crime Solvers at 427-0000.

Rewards are paid in cash and callers do not have to give their name or testify in court to collect.

Navy Man Dies At Home

At approximately 2:30 a.m. on July 29, police received a call from the victim's neighbor that a woman was at her door screaming. The neighbor called police.

When police arrived and checked the victim's apartment they found James Lee Radcliffe, 37, of the 200 block of South bedding Avenue in the bedroom of his apartment, suffering some type of wounds to the upper body area.

The victim was transported to Sentara Norfolk General Hospital by ambulance where he later died. The victim is in the Navy stationed aboard the USS Comble De Grasse.

The investigation into this incident is continuing by members of the department's Homicide Squad. Investigators are awaiting an autopsy to determine cause of death. Anyone with information regarding this case is asked to call Crime Solvers at 427-0000.

Police Patrol On Bikes

The Virginia Beach Police Department has selected another area to be patrolled by officers on bicycles.

On Thursday, July 18, officers on bicycles began patrolling the areas of Lynnhaven Mall, Lynnhaven North, Lynnhaven Crossing and nearby neighborhoods. Four officers have been assigned. Two will work day shift and two will work evenings. The officers will begin by concentrating their patrols in the business areas, however, they will adjust their patrols as needed.

The officers were chosen based, in part, on their enthusiasm for new programs and their physical conditioning.

This program was made possible by the cooperation of North End Cyclery and Lynnhaven Mall.

For further information, contact the Public Affairs Office at 427-4097.

Accident On Wyckoff Lane

On July 14, approximately 4:35 p.m., a single vehicle accident occurred on Wyckoff Lane at Roebing Lane.

A 1989 Honda Accord two-door was eastbound on Wyckoff Lane. The operator of the Honda was Maria L. Monoz, 26, of the 3900 block of Roebing Lane.

A passenger, Magdalena Rivera, 25, of the 300 block of Rosemont Road, was sitting on the hood of the Honda. As the Honda initiated a left turn onto Roebing Lane, Rivera was ejected from the vehicle.

Rivera was transported by Rescue Ambulance to Virginia Beach General Hospital where she was in critical condition.

The investigation is continuing and is being conducted by Officer J.M. Lourenco, Fiscal Crash Team (FACIT), SPOT Bureau.

Police Officers Dismissed, Suspended

The Virginia Beach Police Department has concluded its internal investigation into a report of unnecessary use of force.

The investigation began when an off-duty officer reported what he felt was improper conduct by an officer who had apprehended a felony suspect after a foot chase in the Princess Anne Plaza area.

As a result of the investigation, one officer has been dismissed and a second has been suspended.

The arrested suspect did not require medical treatment and did not make a complaint to Internal Affairs.

Ronald Adams Returns Home From War

Now that the seven-month deployment which began last December for the Virginia-based carrier USS Theodore Roosevelt and her air wing is finally over, Navy Petty Officer Ronald A. Adams and his shipmates in Navy squadron VFA-15 will have time to relive their part in Operation Desert Storm.

But first came the joys associated with homecoming, always an anticipated event for a sailor, but doubly welcomed when a Navy battle group returns from a combat zone. Roosevelt returned to the United States on June 28.

Adams, the son of Elijah Adams of Virginia Beach, checks, maintains and loads bombs and missiles with the Florida-based squadron which flies a hybrid fighter/attack aircraft known as the F/A-18 hornet. Desert Storm was the hornet's first full-scale combat outing, and the feisty aircraft gave Iraqi targets much more than a token buzzing.

The commanding officer of VFA-15, Cmdr. Steve Kunkle, who served as executive officer (second in command) during the war, reported that the squadron dropped over one million pounds of ordinance on targets in Iraq and Kuwait and flew 565 combat sorties during 38 days of wartime operations.

Although the air war was planned with remarkable precision, there were still some surprises, according to Kunkle.

"The massive threat we expected never really materialized, and that was surprising," said Kunkle. "His army and air force were combat experienced, but he must have thought we were 20 feet tall. When Hussein sent his planes to Iran, that was a surprise. We weren't too concerned, however, that he might later attempt a re-launch from Iranian airbases."

"We kept wondering," Kunkle continued, "if he was just suckering us in. He had a lot of military capability, and there never was a single event that made us say, 'We got him now.' We stayed cautious and were just waiting for his final act. No one believed or expected that he'd take such a pounding."

One thing Kunkle does believe is that the squadron's success, and ultimately the success of the war, rested squarely on the shoulders of men like Adams, a 1976 graduate of Orange Park High School in Orange Park, Fla. Describing his contribution to the deployment effort, Adams said, "I believe that my job of leading weapons and maintaining the F/A-18 aircraft weapons systems allowed the pinpoint bombing capabilities that helped shorten the war and stopped a world-wide threat to peace."

Of the six aircraft carriers that took part in Desert Storm only four carried F/A-18s. Considered by military hardware analysts to be extremely well-designed, the hornets lived up to their reputation for dependability and toughness under adverse conditions and while operating at war-time tempo.

"These planes just don't break down," said Kunkle admiringly. "There was also an extraordinary logistics effort made by the Navy to make sure we got the maintenance parts we needed. The logistics pipeline was tremendous."

"As a pilot," he continued, "you have the sense when you get in the aircraft that every crew member in the squadron wants to go with you. The crew men never give you an inferior product. The Hornet is a single-seater, and when you go up you know you've been launched in as perfect a plane as they can make it."

When a cease-fire was finally called in the Gulf, the scenario continued to be perfect for some of the ships who returned to homeport in time to experience the early euphoria of welcome-home celebrations. But the

The Department of Housing and Neighborhood Preservation is engaged in several activities that are designed to help preserve the city's neighborhoods and enhance their quality of life. Some of these are new programs while others are being enhanced by combining or "emphasizing" certain activities in neighborhoods.

The "Certified of Occupancy (CO) Program" is designed to enhance the overall quality of rental housing in the city through periodic inspections, which begin in July 1990 in the Oceanfront and Seateak areas of the city.

This program requires that a housing code enforcement inspector conduct an exterior and interior inspection of rental housing when there is a change in occupancy, but not more than once every 12 months. This helps prevent unsafe housing conditions for renters and helps maintain the quality and value of rental housing. This also

Choice In Virginia Beach Schools

This week's column was written by Jamie Chapman, VBEA UniServ director.

Local school board members attending the Virginia School Board Association's conference last week in Richmond were told that they are a major part of the problem of public education.

About 1,000 public school lay leaders heard John Chubb, a senior fellow at the Brookings Institute, insist that the democratic control of schools is the problem, not the solution, to America's quest to improve public education. Chubb praised the group as a well intentioned and well meaning group of citizens, but at the same time he soberly asked the group why there has been no significant improvement in education in spite of nearly a decade of good intentions and dedicated hard work on the part of policy makers in America. Chubb repeatedly told the group that the problem was not with teachers, but with the system.

This month, the CO Program is being expanded to the Oceana census tract (north of the Naval Air Station). In addition, all code enforcement services are being enhanced in these three areas in order to

He said that the system of running our schools, a top down, regulation loaded approach, creates an environment where the "best qualities in our most successful schools are harder and harder to create." Consequently, he called for the fundamental restructuring of our schools by introducing the notion of competition and choice. Chubb's ideas were never fully developed at the conference due to his limited speaking time and the fact that most of those in attendance could not imagine a

300 Years Proud

Virginia Beach and Princess Anne County were "300 Years Proud" as the Princess Anne County Tricentennial Committee hosted a community-wide family picnic and celebration.

Over 1,000 people came to Princess Anne Park to learn about the significant history of our area. Civil War reenactments and encampments, above, peat-roof music and games and displays featuring documents, information and demonstrations placed together the historically rich quilt that we know as Princess Anne County.

Zikmund Ends Army Career

During his recent retirement ceremony, Robert L. Zikmund, who recently retired to Virginia Beach, applauded an eastern area team that showed its ability "to answer the bell when it rang — for Hurricane Hugo, for just cause in Panama and an Aug. 2, 1990 invasion."

The command's chief of staff stressed that each and every member of eastern area had played an important role in making history — the largest ever deployment of armed forces personnel, equipment and supplies to Southwest Asia.

"It wasn't somebody else" moving all that cargo to make victory in the Persian Gulf possible, Zikmund said. "It was you. You provided the muscle that defeated Iraq."

During the initial phase of Operation Desert Shield, Zikmund served as commander of Task Force Texas, overseeing port operations at MTMC Terminal Houston, LaPorte, and the Beaumont detachment. He was ultimately responsible for the safe receipt, staging and loading of more than five million square feet of cargo.

As chief of staff for the past two years, Zikmund oversaw completion of an extensive port workload analysis for eastern area ports, implementation of the freight management system for the continental United States, and repair and upgrade of ammunition shipping containers.

He also supervised the development and establishment of a staff assistance program for subordinate commands, implementation of a modern record-keeping system at the Military Ocean Terminal, Sunny Point, in Southport, N.C., establishment of command guidelines for the Army's Managing the Civilian work force to Budget program, and restructuring of the command to meet future challenges.

Zikmund also is credited with supervising implementation of a progressive training program to assure employees at all levels receive training to improve their skills.

The new retiree began his Army career in 1962 as a Reserve Officer's Training Corps graduate of Ripon (Wis.) College and later earned a master's degree from the University of Illinois.

went on for the entire length of the deployment. The outpouring of support from the American people helped to keep morale high and to reassure the crew that American were behind them. Memories of the public's ambivalence about Vietnam and the resulting lack of support for those who served there were buried under the avalanche of mail that crowded the carrier's post office.

Adams said, "Thanks, America, for all the support."

Serving His Country

SPCA Wins Free Dog Food

The Virginia Beach SPCA has been named a winner of 350 pounds of free Cycle dog food in a nationwide Gaines/Ken-L. Ration Shelter Cash-In Plan Contest.

The Gaines/Ken-L. Ration Shelter Cash-In Plan, which was initiated in 1981 and is endorsed by the American Humane Association, has more than 1,500 animal shelters participating in the program throughout the country.

Animal shelters have received and collected redemption symbols from all Gaines and Ken-L. Ration dog food products, which they redeem for cash. The top ten shelters in each of three categories collectively won more than seven tons of free dog food. The Virginia Beach SPCA was one of ten shelters with significant improvement in redemption symbols.

Animal shelters, including the Virginia Beach SPCA, receive 20 cents for each Homeless Homer symbol from Gaines and Ken-L. Ration dry or soft/moist dog food products such as Kibbles 'n Bits, Ken-L. Ration, Gravy Train and Cycle. They also receive two cents for each can of dog food and treat products including Cycle, Ken-L. Ration, Snausages and Pupperoni.

To find out more about the contest and how you can help the Virginia Beach SPCA, call 427-6387.

Cats, Dogs Can't Run At Large

The city of Virginia Beach reminds citizens that the city code prohibits cats and dogs from running at large within the city.

Any person owning or having control of a cat or dog within the city must keep the animal confined to their premises unless the animal is in the custody of a responsible person. This does not include game hunting animals in areas where it is lawful to hunt. Cats or dogs violating this code are subject to impoundment and the owner or custodian will be liable for all fines.

The Bureau of Animal Control is responsible for enforcing this provision. To find out if your animal has been impounded, call 427-4158. To report an animal running at large, call 427-5616.

Home Or The Streets? Many Teens Opt For The Latter

More Than 2,000 Runaways Were Reported Last Year; Some Made It Home, Some Are Still Missing

By Karen Dairymple
Staff Writer

Imagine not knowing where your child is, who he is with or why he disappeared.

Last year, more than 2,000 Virginia Beach parents wondered those same things. Come to find out, their children were runaways.

Yes, many of the children left their usually warm, loving, middle class homes for a cold, lonely place better known as the streets. Some of the children fled abusive parents or stepparents, convinced that life as a runaway is better than life at home.

According to Sgt. Ray Greenwood, of the Virginia Beach Police Department's detective bureau, most runaways are between the ages of 14 and 16, though some have been known to leave home as early as age 12.

"They run away because of family problems, drug problems or they're mad because they couldn't go out that night," he said.

Most runaways run straight to a friend's house and often return home soon after. Others run far, either to another state or to a place where they believe they will find the most fun - the Oceanfront. Oftentimes runaways are found sleeping under the boardwalk or in abandoned houses.

"They go for the nightlife, the crowds. We find a lot of runaways at game rooms. It's like a subculture of runaways. They know other people that will help them," said Greenwood. "It doesn't take long for them to make contact with other runaways."

Though most children do run away from home, there are a percentage of them who run from juvenile holding facilities because it is easy to get away, Greenwood said. Those who run from home do so usually because of sexual or physical abuse, drugs and alcohol or the inability to communicate with their parents.

Once a child is discovered missing, Greenwood said, the parents usually notify the police. An officer is then dispatched to the house so the parents can sign a release form, giving the police permission to circulate the child's picture.

When the report is sent to Greenwood's squad, the detectives begin digging for information; they find out where the child likes to hang out, who his friends are, what his interests are.

"A lot of times you make the first phone call and the child's already home," Greenwood said.

The average time that a runaway spends away from home is usually less than a day, Greenwood said. The longest a child has been missing

"We find a lot of runaways at game rooms. It's like a subculture of runaways."

Sgt. Ray Greenwood

ing in Virginia Beach is about four or five months. He added that more teenage girls are reported missing than boys.

"We are fortunate that some kids do come home on their own," he said.

Those who don't come home may survive by stealing money from their parents and hitchhike to get around. Greenwood stressed that not all kids are "tough," no matter how well a child thinks he can handle himself, there are still dangers that they may face.

"If a child is to be injured, abused or molested, most of them don't carry an ID on them. They don't realize the dangers, the people that can take advantage of them. They're a target out there," he said.

Though a fair amount of runaways come from single parent families or stepparent families, Greenwood said that there is no particular trend. Some come from military families, professional families and blue collar families as well.

What about the child who leaves home because of sexual or physical abuse, either by a parent or other family member? Is it fair to return them to an abusive environment? If a child is picked up by police and says he is not going home because of abuse, Greenwood said the police declare it an emergency situation and refer the child to a family trauma squad.

Instead of sending the child back home, the squad first makes sure that the perpetrator of the abuse is taken out of the home and is arrested, but only if there is probable cause.

If a child claims that his parents sometimes hit him with a belt or yells at him frequently, he is usually referred to Child Protective Services or to a non-secure juvenile holding facility such as the Seton House for Girls.

Though most runaways are found - only two or three were not cleared by police last year - there have been cases where the child has turned up dead. Last year, for example, a teenage girl who had a reputation for running away was found murdered in a trash bin behind a grocery store.

"That's probably what most parents fear," Greenwood said. "It's frustrating, you try to help parents

Seven-Day Deer Hunt At Back Bay Wildlife Refuge

Back Bay National Wildlife Refuge will hold a seven-day deer hunt for white-tailed deer and feral hogs beginning on Oct. 5 and concluding on Oct. 12.

The first day of the hunt (Oct. 5) will be limited to bow hunting and the remaining six days (Oct. 7 through 12) will be open to shotgun hunting. No hunting will take place on Sunday, Oct.

6. Refuge manager, Anthony D. Leger, stated that the refuge hunts, which have been held annually since 1986, are aimed at reducing the over-populated herd.

Hunting will once again take place on 2,007 acres of refuge lands, contained within several pre-determined zones. Habitat to be hunted will include marsh, forests and fields. All hunting will be in accordance with state regulations and bag limits, and is subject to additional refuge-specific regulations.

A total of 62 hunters per day will be issued permits to participate in the hunt. This year, for the first time at Back Bay NWR, a special lottery will be held to accommodate an additional two non-amulatory hunters per day. Reservations for hunt days and zones will be on a computer lottery basis.

Hunters must submit an application form postmarked no later than Sept. 7 to be eligible for the lottery. Applications and hunter information packets will be available from the refuge beginning August 1.

The lottery will be held at 10 a.m., on Sept. 16 at the refuge headquarters and will be open to the public. A list will be posted at the Visitor Contact Station and all selected hunters will be notified by mail. Each refuge hunter will be charged a $10 cost recovery fee, to be paid on the day of the hunt.

Nearly 560 applications were received for the 434 hunting slots available in 1990. During last year's six-day season, hunters harvested 30 deer, 15 does and 15 bucks. The overall hunter success rate was nine percent. One feral hog was also taken.

According to Leger, the hunt provides an opportunity to manage wildlife populations, as well as providing wildlife-oriented recreational opportunities in the Virginia Beach area. Currently, the refuge also provides opportunities for bird watching, photography, hiking, bicycling, fishing, nature study and for participation in educational programs.

The operation of the hunt serves a wildlife-oriented public that has traditionally supported the management of national wildlife refuges and other public lands. The refuge will be closed to all other uses during the hunting period (from Oct. 5 through 12 inclusive).

Individuals interested in participation in the Back Bay NWR hunt should contact the refuge at 721-2412 beginning the first of August to request a hunter information packet. Written requests should be made to the refuge manager, Back Bay National Wildlife Refuge, P.O., Box 6286, Virginia Beach, VA 23456-0286.

Small Grain Referendum House Bill Passed

The 1991 Virginia Legislature passed house bill 1705 which gives Virginia Beach small grain producers the opportunity to vote on a self-help check-off program. The referendum will be conducted by the Office of the Commissioner of Agriculture and Consumer Services.

The purpose of the referendum is to determine if Virginia small grain producers wish to assess themselves at the rate of one-half of one percent of the selling price per bushel on all small grains. Small grains include barley, wheat, oats and rye. The assessment will be taken out at the first point of sale similar to current check-off programs on corn and soybeans.

All producers who sold small grains two of the past three years (Oct. 4, 1988 to date) are eligible to vote if they complete a certification form by August 30, and return the ballot to be mailed to them on Sept. 17.

The funds are to be used to enhance market development, research and education programs being conducted with small grains and to develop new programs as determined by a small grain board composed mainly of producers. Virginia producers are among the best and most competitive in small grain production in the country.

Check-off funds are essential to support research needed to maintain this competitive edge. Specialty markets for small grains also need to be explored. House Bill 1705 states that "money from the fund shall not be diverted or expended for any purpose other than those set forth in this chapter unless authorized by a specific act of assembly."

Ballots will be counted on Oct. 10 and the results certified to the Commissioner of Agriculture and Consumer Services. The decision on the referendum will be based on a simple majority of those voting. The commissioner of agriculture will publicly declare the results of the referendum and certify the results to the governor and the Board of Agriculture and Consumer Services by Oct. 11.

Copies of the certification forms are available at local Virginia Cooperative Extension agent offices and Virginia Department of Agriculture and Consumer Service offices.

Persons having questions about this referendum should contact their local extension agent or Dr. Daniel Brann, extension grains specialist at Vir-

Local Models Place In "The Look Of The Year"

Several Virginia Beach teenagers recently competed in the world's largest international fashion model search, "The Look of the Year." The talent audition was held at Military Circle mall.

Now in its eighth year, the contest is the creation of John Casablancas, chairman of the board of the International Elite Model Management Corporation in New York. The annual event searches more than 30 countries to provide fresh new faces and offer hundreds of aspiring models a career to success.

First place: Tina Estes, daughter of Jennifer and Gene Estes, and 15-year-old Kellam High School sophomore.

First runner-up: Tina's 13-year-old sister, Erin Estes, a 57th Princess Anne Junior High School student.

Second runner-up: Kristy Redmon, daughter of Pippi and Justin Redmon, and a 13-year-old Cape Henry Collegiate School student.

Recreation

Boaters Have More Time To Purchase Decals

Virginia Beach recreational boaters who are technically required to obtain a new federal boat "user fee" tax decal by July 31, but who have not yet purchased one, will find that there is some slack in the Coast Guard's enforcement policy.

According to the Coast Guard, the month of August, will be a "grace period." Boaters stopped by the Coast Guard will not be issued a summons, but instead will be given information on how to purchase a "user fee" tax decal.

Beginning Sept. 1, boaters stopped by the Coast Guard will be issued a summons. However, anyone issued a summons during September will have 30 days to purchase the boat "user fee" tax decal and thereby avoid a fine.

The Coast Guard has the authority to levy fines up to $5,000 for non-compliance and will begin "normal enforcement procedures" on Oct. 1.

The Coast Guard estimates that 4.1 million boaters will have to pay this new federal boat "user fee" tax. BOAT/U.S. has learned, however, that just over one percent of all boaters subject to this new tax have obtained a decal.

The annual charge for the boat "user fee" tax is as follows: $25 for boats larger than 16 feet but less than 20 feet; $35 for boats larger than 20 feet but less than 27 feet; $50 for boats larger than 27 feet but less than 40 feet; and $100 for boats over 40 feet.

Boaters may call 800-848-

2100 to charge the boat tax to their credit card or obtain a "decal request form" to pay by check. Boaters wishing information may call the Coast Guard direct at 800-368-5647.

The new boat tax applies to boaters using the coastal waters and Great Lakes, waters subject to tidal influence and non-tidal waters from which a 16-foot powerboat with a displacement hull can navigate to tidal waters.

Club Report

Local Girl Scouts Recognized

Virginia Beach's Jennifer Alt, Elizabeth Hunt and Adrienne Robertson, have been selected for a national Girl Scout event, "Cracks, Crevices, and Crawlways II."

These three girls are among 31 Girl Scouts, ages 15-18, chosen throughout the country for the caving event hosted by Girl Scout Council of Colonial Coast, Virginia Beach.

"Cracks, Crevices, and Crawlways II" is part of Girl Scout's Wilder Opportunities program. Girls travel beyond their circle of family, friends and the local community to explore their own interests and try new skills in new environments.

At the caving event, girls will explore caves in Organ Cave, W.Va. Using only the light from a hard hat lamp, girls will slush through underground streams, explore the beauty of spelothems and discover Civil War relics that are preserved deep underground.

After exploring the world from the inside out, the girls will tour the world's largest naval base in Norfolk; day trip to North Carolina's Outer Banks to visit the Wright Brothers Memorial Museum and other historic sites; go swimming and crabbing in the Atlantic Ocean; tour Virginia Beach's Marine Science Museum; and visit the first permanent English settlement in the New World in Jamestown, Va.

Alt, who has been a Girl Scout for six years, will be a sophomore at Princess Anne High School. She is a member of the National Junior Honor Society, Academic Challenge Team, Adventure Explorer Post 900, youth ministries group and a volunteer at Bayside Library.

Hunt, who has been in Girl Scouting for seven years, will be a junior at Kempville high school. She is a member of the French honor society, marching band and on the staff of her school's Montague literary magazine.

Robertson, who has been a Girl Scout for 11 years, will be a senior at Cox High School. She is a member of the debate team and track.

Dance Set For Handicapped

He is the son of Peter Czanowski of Virginia Beach.

Business

Christmas Tree Growers Meet

The ins and outs of Christmas tree farming, plus a retailer workshop, will be the focus of the Virginia Christmas Tree Growers Association annual convention, to be held from August 22 through 24 at the Radisson hotel.

About 200 Virginia Christmas tree growers and retailers are expected to attend the convention. There are an estimated 1,600 Christmas tree growers in Virginia.

The workshop for retailers on Friday, August 23 is designed primarily for independent lot operators and representative from civic groups that sell Christmas trees each year as a fund raising event. The retailer workshop will include a session on retail lot management, followed by a session on salesmanship and auxiliary sales projects.

The convention programs include sessions for both the novice and the experienced Christmas tree farmer. It also includes a session for people who are thinking about getting into the business of Christmas tree farming.

For the novice Christmas tree grower, the convention will include several sessions on Thursday, August 22, including species selection for Christmas tree farms, establishing your first Christmas tree plantation, Christmas tree shearing, and pest management.

For advanced growers, sessions on Friday, August 23 will cover topics on herbicides, trends in Christmas tree production and marketing, selection and use of colorants, the importance of Christmas tree quality, contracts and shipping, among others.

Sessions on alternative agricultural products for tree farmers, tree compatible ground covers and first-aid for farm injuries are included in the program. Also, workshops on bookkeeping/taxes and on wreath decorating will be offered.

On Saturday, convention participants will tour the Hampton Roads Agricultural Experiment Station where research on Christmas trees and nursery stock is conducted; Henley Farms, a choose-and-cut farm, with pick-your-own fruits and vegetables; and Ehrenzeller Tree Farm for shearing and equipment demonstrations.

For registration information, contact Ms. Katherine Ward, Tamuin Farms in Deerfield, at (703) 939-4646.

Ad Firm Wins Telly Awards

Two 30-second television spots created by Barker Campbell and Farley have been named finalists in the twelfth annual Telly Awards.

"Timeless Traveler," created for the Virginia Marine Science Museum, and "Bargain News," created for South Carolina Bank, were chosen from among 4,000 national Telly Award Entries.

"Timeless Traveler" portrays the voyages of the loggerback sea turtle, which roams the floor of the Chesapeake Bay. The voice of Peter Gerald, set to soft background music, tells the tale of the turtle while inviting the audience to attend the sea turtle exhibit at the Virginia Marine Science Museum. The "Timeless Traveler" spot aired on Hampton Roads media outlets for six months in 1990.

The Virginia Beach agency also won a Telly Award for a television spot created to introduce free checking for South Carolina National Bank. B&F interspersed live action footage with old animation and black-and-white silent film, and gave the spot the format of an old movie newsreel. The voice of a 40s newscaster announced the many benefits of "bargain checking" at SCN. The spot aired for four months in 1990 on television stations throughout South Carolina.

Telephone Books Delivered

New telephone directories are now being delivered to GTE/Contel customers in the Princess Anne area, according to Michael R. Meiggs, local manager in Virginia Beach.

Each customer should receive at least one book, Meiggs said. The GTE/Contel business office phone number is 468-8811.

The new book includes GTE/Contel and C&P Telephone listings from: Battlefield, Great Bridge, Hickory, Chesapeake, Princess Anne, Pungo, Ships Cove, Virginia Beach, Norfolk, Portsmouth and Knotts Island, N.C.

The Princess Anne-Chesapeake serving area will be one of the first to receive a directory reflecting the merger of GTE and Contel. The directory cover photo displays both company names. Meiggs urges customers to take a few minutes when they receive their books and skim the introductory pages.

The introductory pages include information on: emergency numbers for police, fire and rescue; money saving tips; how to complete all types of long distance calls, including direct dial, calling card and overseas calls; how-to information on installing and disconnecting your telephone in your home; telephone numbers and information on doing business with the phone company.

In the Princess Anne serving area, GTE/Contel provides local telephone service to more than 7,900 customers, according to Meiggs.

Businessman Sentenced To 2 Years

A former Virginia Beach businessman was sentenced recently in U.S. District Court by Judge John MacKenzie.

Dennis Jones, nephew of Charles Kidd and former employee of TW3, Inc., received a two-year suspended sentence, three years probation, a $2,000 fine, and a $150 special assessment fee. A jury convicted Jones on June 7 to one count of conspiracy and two counts of federal income tax evasion.

According to court records, Jones helped maintain two sets of books for TW3, Inc., a corporation which operated bars and restaurants in Virginia Beach and Hampton. One set of books reflected the true income and expenses of the corporation, and the other grossly understated income and overstated certain expenses.

Jones filed false corporate income tax returns with the IRS for the years 1985 and 1986, attempting to evade $295,710 in corporate income taxes.

Kidd, sole stockholder and chief responsible officer to TW3, Inc., which operated the Continental Room in Hampton and the Continental Room-Arizona in Virginia Beach, was sentenced to one year in prison on April 17, 1990 for tax evasion.

CPA Firms Appoints Bariteau

Zukerman and Associates, Ltd., Certified Public Accountants, has announced the appointment of Peter F. Bariteau, C.P.A., as senior audit manager and firm administrator.

He is responsible for all client financial statement services, including audits, reviews and compilations, as well as all administrative aspects of the firm.

Prior to joining Zukerman, Bariteau was a senior manager in the audit department with Price Waterhouse in Norfolk.

The accounting firm is located on Business Park Drive. Herbert J. Zukerman is president.

Patriotic Tributes

As thousands lined Atlantic Avenue June 1, there was little doubt that it was going to be an exciting day of patriotic tributes and community spirit. The event: the Star Spangled Salute. The purpose: to welcome home the brave men and women of Operation Desert Shield and Desert Storm.

Throughout the Persian Gulf war, Mayor Oberndorf's Operation Home Front projects demonstrated support for our military. As the war ended, planning began to fund and conduct a huge homecoming party. It took hundreds of volunteers including 100 city employees, to create the day's extremely successful events, beginning with a two-hour oceanfront parade of marching bands, honor guards and floats.

Veterans from World War I and II, Korea, Vietnam and Desert Storm were also represented, receiving the warmest reception from the crowd. Next, military and civilian families alike enjoyed a picnic/concert at NAS Oceana featuring The Marshall Tucker Band, Wayne Jennings and Joan Jett. The day's events ended with a spectacular fireworks display.

School

New Students Should Enroll Immediately

New students or those transferring within the Virginia Beach school system should enroll as soon as possible at the elementary, junior high or senior high school to which their neighborhood is assigned.

This is usually the school nearest the student's residence. The Office of Pupil Services (427-4791) has a complete listing of all school attendance zones and can answer questions about specific neighborhood assignments.

Early student registration is requested to ensure that each school assigns the appropriate number of teachers to meet the state pupil-teacher ratio requirements.

Parents enrolling their children in a Virginia Beach School for the first time must present a birth certificate.

Parents enrolling their children in a Virginia Beach school for the first time must present a certified birth certificate to the school.

Also needed are the student's Social Security number, physical examination form with immunization record, and a report card from the last school of attendance, if applicable.

Transfer certificates and/or scholastic records from a previous school help place the student at the appropriate grade level. An official transcript from the

Further information is available from each public school, the office of Pupil Services (427-4791) and the office of community Relations (427-4641).

McClanan Children Graduate

Glenn B. McClanan, Jr., son of Glenn and Reba McClanan and 1986 valedictorian of Kellam High School, received his Bachelor of Arts in Asian studies with high honors in May from the University of California at Berkeley.

McClanan plans to attend New York University Tisch School of the Arts in the fall to study film and television production.

Anne L. McClanan, daughter of Glenn and Reba McClanan and a 1989 Columbia University graduate, received her Master's Degree in history of art from Johns Hopkins University in May.

Anne, who was a First Colo-

What Virginia Beach Residents Should Know About Plumbing

Choosing The Right Plumbing Material

Thinking about putting in new plumbing? Knowing the facts about copper vs. polybutylene plumbing could prevent your home improvement project from being a total washout.

Choosing the right plumbing material can save you a lot of worry and money, experts agree. Many Virginia Beach residents thought they could save money by choosing a plastic plumbing material called polybutylene instead of the slightly more expensive copper. The fact is, many people who picked polybutylene wound up having to pay for costly repairs when their plastic plumbing systems failed. The city of San Antonio, Texas, which installed some 380 miles of polybutylene piping, found it failing at the rate of 1,000 leaks a month!

Copper plumbing, on the other hand, has many advantages polybutylene can't match:

- Copper plumbing is built to last - it's virtually maintenance-free.
- Unlike plastic plumbing, copper won't burn or melt in service, or give off toxic gases if exposed to flame.

- Copper tubes and joints are strong. They can withstand pressure surges and rapid temperature changes without rupturing.
- Copper's an investment - its high quality can actually enhance your home's resale value.

- Copper meets or exceeds all standard plumbing codes in all 50 states.

- The manufacturer of copper today is friendly to the environment and the process is energy efficient. Copper tube is made largely of recycled material and does not contain foreign oil or petroleum products as plastic does. The U.S. is self-sufficient in copper, with more than 50 percent of many plumbing products derived from recycled materials.

Gardening Tips For People With Arthritis

Gardening is a relaxing recreation for some Virginia Beach residents. But for people with arthritis it can mean pain, fatigue and frustration. The following gardening tips are for people with arthritis to help make everyday gardening less painful.

- If you have a small garden, you can grow items at an elevated level by using bushel baskets as planters. This will keep you from bending and straining your knees.

- Plant your flower gardens in raised flower beds. This makes planting, weeding and feeding almost effortless with no bending.
- Bring your garden indoors by using a bay window, porch or sunny room.
- Sit on a low stool when weeding to reduce bending and strain.
- Make tools easier to grip by adding foam rubber padding to the handles.

- Wear a pair of cotton or canvas gloves to keep your joints from becoming bruised easily.

- Avoid carrying heavy watering cans and bulky garden hoses by setting up a sprinkler and leaving it in place permanently.

- Consider using pulleys on hanging house plants. The plants can be lowered easily for care, and then raised again.

Don't let arthritis get in the way of your successful garden.

Au Pair

household chores like any other member of the family.

"I'm not a Cinderella type. I do help out if they have a very busy schedule. I do the children's laundry," said Revell, whose host family has their own cleaning lady.

Au pairs are carefully interviewed and screened, as are the families, before being accepted into the program, Sijswerda said. The au pair must have child care experience and provide references, must have a doctor's clean bill of health and valid driver's license and must be fluent in English.

The one difference between American "au pairs" and foreign au pairs, said Sijswerda, who has hosted both in her home, is the cultural element.

"You're able to learn about other people in this world. It becomes a learning experience," she said.

Host families must pay a $3,000

Maggie Revell

program fee for an au pair, which includes air transportation, health insurance and a counselor. They also pay the au pair $100 per week for pocket money. A total of $8,000 divided by 52 weeks is $170 per week, which is about what a day care center would charge for two children. One of the biggest advantages to in-home care, Sijswerda said, is if a child is ill.

"I like the fact that the au pair can do some evening sitting, too," she said.

Phil Combest and his wife, Debbie, have also been hosting an English au pair in their Seabreeze Farm home for three or four months. Combest and his wife, who both work for an airline, are away from home several days out of the month. The au pair is there to take care of their two sons, ages five and one.

"She takes them on little outings, to the park, the beach, the museum. She's really good with them," said Combest.

laire, has become like a part of the family and the kids love her.

Sijswerda said that when an au pair first arrives, she usually spends a lot of time with the family, but once she begins to make friends, she goes out more often. Revell said she often spends time with other au pairs in the area because they have a lot in common. On the weekends, she enjoys going out and has found that Virginia Beach nightclubs and music are much different from England's. She added that there is more public transportation in England, but the people in America are friendlier.

"It's a totally different culture," she said.

Combest, who has had an au pair in his home before, but not one from England, said his family has learned much about Claire's culture.

"You learn a lot talking to her. A lot of her expressions are funny," he said.

There are currently six Virginia Beach families hosting au pairs - four already have an au pair in the home and two are awaiting one. For more information, interested families can call AuPairCare at 1-800-288-7786.

seous or dizzy, to seek shade. On July 21, the day the temperature hit 100-degrees, Brinson said he began to feel sick at about 2:30 p.m. He finished the day's work, but didn't feel up to par until the next day, he said.

As hot as it may seem, this summer's heatwave is not the worst that the area has ever seen. According to Dewey Walston, a National Weather Service meteorologist, no heat records have been broken this year. The hottest day on record was in 1952 when temperatures hit 101 degrees.

"This is nowhere near being the worst heatwave we've had," he said. This summer's hottest day so far was July 21, when the 100-degree temperature, combined with a high humidity level, caused the air to be about 115 degrees. As of last week, Virginia Beach had only seen six consecutive days with temperatures over 90 degrees.

In July of 1961, Walston said, residents saw 14 straight days of 90 degrees or higher and three consecutive days of 100 degrees and above. So, this July is the second warmest on record.

"We will still stay above normal, but not as hot. We'll see readings in the upper 80s and low 90s," said Walston, giving an extended forecast. "We're going to cool off slightly to less insane, more typical summer weather."

The reason for the high temperature, Walston said, is the high pressure that is stationary over the southeastern United States. The strong sun, which causes the air masses to become even warmer, has begun to weaken and move offshore. In addition to the searing sun rays, breathing was made difficult because of stagnant air pollution, he said.

"It's unbearable, plus once you get a heat index over 105 degrees, it's considered dangerous," Walston said.

Kiley offered some ways to beat the heat, the number one way being to avoid the heat all together.

"Drink lots of water, juices, cool drinks, but not soft drinks. They cause carbohydrates to be eaten up in the minerals," he said.

Kiley also advises those who

must be outdoors to slow down, dress coolly in light colored clothing, and avoid salty foods which retain fluid and prevents the body from sweating it out.

Brinson, who has been with the postal service for 12 years, makes sure he takes vitamins daily to restore the minerals in his body, and drinks lots of Gatorade. Plus, he is often offered water or lemonade by some of his customers.

Though he dresses lightly in Bermuda shorts, knee socks and a short-sleeved shirt, Brinson said he still finds himself drenched at the end of the day. Even his shoes and socks are wet with sweat, he said.

"As far as the heat's concerned, this is the worst I've ever seen it," he said. "If it's a continuing thing, I don't know if some people can handle it. It's life-threatening. It's definitely not a game working out in that heat."

Arts Center Offers Art Camp Courses

The Virginia Beach Center for the Arts' ArtCamp 1991 courses are now underway. Seventy-three courses are available in eight week-long sessions so children may try their hands at a myriad of art forms during the vacation season.

Age groups are four to five/preschool, five to six/kindergarten, seven to nine, 10 to 12, 12 to 14 and 13 to 16. Tuition is $35 per session for VBCEA members, $45 for non-members. Each class requires a $10 materials fee. Children may register for as many as they wish.

The deadline to register a child for each class is the Thursday before the class is to begin on the following Monday. Registration is conducted throughout the eight weeks. No refunds will be given, unless a class is cancelled by the center. Class transfers and credits are available before the registration deadline.

Call the center at 425-0000 for information and course schedules.

What exactly did Chubb have in mind when he proposed choice for the parents and student of a community? The answer lies in Chubb's and Moe's book, Politics Markets America's Schools. First of all, he wants to create autonomous schools. "The key to effective education rests with unleashing the productive potential that is already present in the schools and their personnel. It rests with granting them the autonomy to do what they do best."

Second, he wants schools to be able to compete for the support of parents and students, and parents and students to be free to choose among schools. His system would be built around decentralization, competition and choice. Consequently, the marketplace would gradually allow the good schools to prosper and the poor schools to go out of business.

Chubb's theories are limited to research on high schools so his argument will be explored in this capacity. Suppose that all children living in Virginia Beach had the ability to choose which high school in the city they would attend. Suppose further that every high school in Virginia Beach was free to offer an educational program that would compete for students. Would the vast majority of students receive a better education than they currently are receiving in our high schools? Chubb and Moe are convinced that they would. Most everyone else is doubtful.

Questions that come to mind include: Once a school reaches capacity, how are admission standards established? Can schools exclude students based upon their academic performance or lack of performance? Will some schools end up being "cast-off" schools? Will transportation be provided city-wide? Will public funding follow students that choose private or home schooling? Will there be any accountability to the public?

The state of Minnesota has had choice for the entire state for several years now and the biggest influence on choice so far has been athletic programs at the various high schools. In essence, the students and parents that have selected a school outside of their regular attendance district have done so because of the lure of that school's athletic program, not its academic program. Would this become the real reason for choosing a high school in Virginia Beach?

Would choice foster the notion of creating specialty schools? Maybe Princess Anne would become the school for performing arts, while Bayside, First Colonial and Green Run would become schools with advanced math and science. Cox might become the school with an international baccalaureate and Kellam would offer the latest in technology. A classical education would be offered at Kempville and Salem High Schools.

The next series of questions that come to mind are the choice of teachers. Would students and their parents be allowed to select the teachers of their choice as they do at the university? If the demand for a particular teacher was greater than that teacher could accommodate, would the teacher then be able to select his or her students? Would unwanted teachers be out of jobs? What about unwanted students? The questions go on and on, but the idea of choice was a simplistic magic that tickles the imagination.

Will the citizens of Virginia Beach ever allow such experimentation in their high schools? The decision must be made by the citizens' democratic representatives - The Board of Education. Let them know what you think about the idea. They have our schools in their hands.

provide a concentrated effort to improve the condition and appearance of the housing. This effort includes systematic exterior inspections to identify and cite housing that is in violation of the housing code, enhanced efforts to enforce the city's weed, trash and junk ordinances, and close coordination with the Zoning Division to enforce the removal of junk cars.

To complement and enhance these code enforcement activities, the department's housing rehabilitation loan and grant assistance is available to those homeowners and landlords who are eligible for and wish to obtain funds to improve their properties. There are a variety of options available to meet their needs, including a new "facade" program that will assist property owners in improving the exterior of their houses without requiring major interior work.

Assisting the department in allocating its resources more effectively are the results of the recently completed citywide Housing Condition Survey. The survey, the first of its kind in the city, was conducted in late 1990 by trained personnel who rated the exterior condition of each house according to a four-point scale that ranged from "standard," (the house meets the code) to "dilapidated" (the house is most likely beyond repair and needs to be removed).

The housing survey was conducted in order to provide the basis for the development and location of plans and programs for housing assistance and code enforcement, as well as other needed city services and activities. It marks the first time that the city has held this information available upon which to plan and to evaluate the effectiveness of its neighborhood preservation efforts.

This article was compiled with the assistance of Andrew Friedman, housing development administrator, Virginia Beach Department of Housing and Neighborhood Preservation.

tional characteristics, attitudes and probability of success. These procedures result in the acceptance of one in ten applicants.

As part of my management philosophy, I have directed that performance cannot and will not be measured in terms of numbers of arrests. I hold first line supervisors responsible for becoming familiar with the policing styles of their subordinates, and observing them regularly to gauge effectiveness without the use of numbers alone.

In an effort to identify any problems officers may have, we have undertaken an in-depth examination of officers who make a lot of physical arrests for certain types of charges. The study demonstrated that these charges increased in relation to the total number of charges brought by an officer, and the rate of these charges has decreased from the early 1980s, in spite of population increases.

Alcohol violations were frequently involved in these arrests, and 64 percent of the arrested persons had at least one non-related charge on record. We will continue to effect studies that may alert us to any patterns of excessive force or officers who need corrective training/discipline.

Even the best management practices cannot completely prevent isolated uses of excessive force. In spite of holding supervisors accountable for recognizing problem officers and confidential referrals for counseling, the stresses and pressures of police work can sometimes tax an officer's normally calm demeanor. This possibility makes it vital that we provide citizens with an avenue for investigation of complaints. In a later report to the community, I will explain how this process works.
